Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

Concorde Done

The Little Known Disaster That Never Happened In The Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

Those tremendous bangs that happen twice a day everyday in the Hamptons, rattling windows and sending dishes in cabinets crashing to the floor, are finally going to stop. No more supersonic trans-Atlantic aircraft will come crashing through the sound barrier as they slow down toward Kennedy. The era of the Concorde, after 27 years, is coming to an end.

The daily disaster described above never happens, of course. But that it might have happened, was a very big deal at the time when it was announced that these jets had been approved to land at JFK. Protesters marched in the streets out here. In New York, people lay down in the runway where the plane would be coming in and had to be hauled away. There were predictions of deafness, of mental collapse, of windows breaking. In the end, none of it happened. The Concorde decelerated through the sound barrier over the ocean. The protesters moved on to something else.

Protesting is a time-honored way of stopping what is perceived to be uncaring government behavior in this country. Sometimes it affects decisions and sometimes it doesn't. With the passing of the Concorde, it is fair to note that sometimes protesters are simply wrong. And it also is fair to note that people who protest rarely admit to that fact. Thus was an important lesson learned, well, actually not learned, in the connection between the Concorde and the East End.

Concorde could cruise at a speed of Mach 2, or 1,336 MPH, and could get across the Atlantic in just three hours instead of six, that orders from airlines all over the world pour in. None did.

The facts on the Concorde are these. The British and French governments signed an agreement to develop the faster-than-sound Concorde prototypes in 1962 and after many test flights around the world, the first commercial-production Concorde makes its maiden voyage in 1973. The hope was that since the

Then, in 1973, a month before the Concorde's maiden voyage, an aircraft similar to it, secretly built by the Soviet Union, was unveiled at the Paris air Show. It took off, circled around, then crashed in a ball of fire. Thirteen people died. The Soviets never built another one.

Also about that time, America considered building a rival to the Concorde. Models were made. That effort ended, too.

Passenger flights of Concorde across the Atlantic began on May 24, 1976 with flights from London and Paris. There were 100 titanium seats covered in deep blue Connolly leather, champagne, flowers and fine food service on board. Over the next twenty-six years, service continued with both Air France and British Airways, sustaining losses of about $10 million every year. They kept the flights going in the hopes passenger ridership would improve. They kept them going also because they represented the new benchmark speed record in crossing the Atlantic, a time that was decreasing faster and faster since the beginning of the Industrial Revolution. (Now it goes back up.)

Concordes also were seen as great specialty ships showing the glittering leadership of these two airlines. Sometimes they would fly with as few as ten passengers. Many rock stars, celebrities, world leaders and billionaires flew the Concorde. It was for a long time a dress-up experience and women wore furs and their best jewelry and the men wore suits and ties. The cost of a round trip was $6,500.

During the early 1970s, when the protesters were out predicting doom for the East End, this country was very different than it is today. The government was not to be trusted. The military-industrial complex was not to be trusted. It would take an in-your-face protest to bring anything to their attention. And it often did.

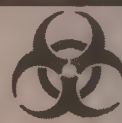

Today, most of us feel far more comfortable with the government's responsiveness to the people. We may not agree with what they do, but we do believe they listen.

Yet irrational protesting continues. Last week, protesters in Connecticut succeeded in stopping the activation of the underwater electric cable between Connecticut and Long Island. The thing works just fine. There are many underwater cables that work fine. This one they got stopped on a technicality because the seabed of Long Island Sound is not as deep as some people thought and the builders had signed an agreement it would be a certain number of feet underwater and they cannot live up to that.

This summer, if we have a blackout, it might stay blacked out. Read Dan's Papers by candlelight.

A Visitor From 150 Years Ago Appears In Amagansett

By Dan Rattiner

Sometimes, the most exciting thing you can do in the Hamptons is just walk along the beach. We parked at Indian Wells Beach in Amagansett last Saturday at midday, and proceeded East, intending to walk to Atlantic Avenue Beach and back, a distance of two miles. We never made it.

About halfway down the beach, just past a giant log that had washed ashore, we came upon what at first I thought were the remains of an old wooden jetty. The waves would slide in, covering it. Then they would slide out, revealing a series of vertical wooden slats connected together by some beams. Whatever it was, it was solidly held in the sand there as the waves washed in and out. We walked over.

This day, the day before Easter, was a day with sunny skies, a warm breeze and the temperature hovering around sixty-five. There were plenty of people about, running their dogs, playing Frisbee, wading in the surf. But none seemed interested in this wooden structure.

The waves slid out again, and suddenly, we could see exactly what this was. A picture of it accompanies this article. It wasn't a jetty. It also wasn't the lower jaw of an impossibly large sea creature — a curving of jawbone and teeth jutting up. It was the lower half of a huge wooden shipwreck slid up on the sand stern first. It was still in the surf in the water. But if you had a bathing suit on, which we didn't, you could have waded out to it. It had not been there before, that I refrom the scouring of the sand, a huge skeleton. At thirty feet, this likely meant that the length of the ship, if it were visible, which it was not, since it was down at the bow under the ocean, would very likely exceed 100 feet. It was a vessel of considerable size.

"I think we are looking at something about 150 years old," I said.

When we got home, I called two people I know who I thought might know what this was. Larry Penny, the town environmentalist. And bayman Stuart Vorpahl, a longtime local resident with a vast knowledge of the land and the sea.

"Where did you say this was?" Penny said.

I told him again. He said he'd been down that way with some frequency, but he had not seen it. It must have just come up.

"There's lots buried in the sand," he said. "The sea scours out the sand in a random fashion. Things come up."

"This is very, very large," I said. "And obviously, it's just the ribs, from below decks down. Which means the two sides have to be attached under called.

On the beach, I made imaginary lines from the sides of the ship up to where we were and paced it off, from starboard to port. It was thirty feet, its curving blackened wooden ribs on both sides bulging outwards, each rib rounded at the top the sand."

"Maybe all of it will come up," Penny said. "But I doubt it. Get pictures of it."

I told him if he wanted to see it, the tide, according to the table I had, would have been high just an hour before our sighting. It would be even more visible around seven p.m. when the surf was out.

"If you want a good look at it," I said, "head down there at sunset."

I called Vorpahl. He's had a court case going for the last four years, fighting to get the State of New York Department of Fisheries to recognize the Dongan Patent, an edict issued by the King of England in 1686 saying that any resident of the community has the perpetual right to fish the seas unencumbered. Vorpahl's family goes back that far. The State wants Vorpahl to buy a fishing license. Vorpahl keeps a copy of the Patent on the deck of his fishing boat.

"That's the CATHERINE," he told me. "From Ireland. Bringing Irish immigrants out of the famine. Came ashore there around 1850. Last time it was seen was thirty years ago. I was down there with my cocker spaniel. Took pictures of it. That was around 1965. Hadn't seen it since."

"You might see more of it around sunset," I told him.

"Well, I saw it then," he said. "But I'll tell the Harbor Patrol. Maybe they'd be interested."

I researched this shipwreck. In January, 1851, Captain Jeremiah "Jed" Conkling of Amagansett became Wreck Master. He offered a $10 reward, the usual amount at the time, for any information about any ship ashore in his territory, which was Montauk to Bridgehampton. Getting information to him could save lives. And as you will learn later, save cargo.

The CATHERINE slid up on the beach there in Amagansett at 2 o'clock in the afternoon on August 25 with a cargo of 300 Irishmen and women and children plus all their private possessions. Also some cargo of iron, salt and soap. Why it came ashore is not known. It was out of Liverpool with a stop in Dublin and a final destination of New York City. The immigrants would have been processed in at Castle Rock, an island near Ellis Island. The more famous Ellis Island facility would not be built until the 1880s. There is no mention of anyone collecting Conkling's $10.

What is known is that most of the cargo, together with all 300 people along with their belongings were rescued, except for two, whose belongings in duffel bags were farthest down in the hold. Those two lived, but they lost everything they owned, covered by the sea and the sand inside the boat.

At this particular time, the port of Sag Harbor, nine miles away, was just at its peak as a bustling whaling town. It had a newspaper, the CORRECTOR, and two weeks after the wreck, the CORRECTOR reported that six days after the CATHERINE came ashore, a steamer called the ACHILLES came to Sag Harbor and the Irish and the crew boarded it and headed off to New

The Most Deadly Job For An American In The War Was Not As A Soldier

By Dan Rattiner

With the war in Iraq quieting down, it is worth looking at a very interesting statistic, which is the number of western journalists who have perished in this conflict. At last count, there were 18 of them. Compare this to the approximately 180 soldiers that were killed.

If you were a soldier in this war, your chances of dying were about 1 in 1,500. I got this figure by comparing the number of those who perished to the number of those in the war zone. If you were a journalist covering this war, your chances of dying were about 1 in 150, using the number of accredited journalists attached to different newspapers and magazines and TV networks who were there as a comparison.

We have made a great fuss over our soldiers, particularly those who died or were wounded, and deservedly so. Any casualties at all were too many. And for those grieving families, nothing will bring those people back.

But what about those covering the war? Particularly those who were "embedded," as the phrase was put, serving inside a particular military unit? I have not heard of any group or rally to "Support Our Journalists." I have not heard or read one report about the fact that those journalists who went into this war zone died, demonstrably, at ten times the rate of our soldiers.

What is particularly shocking to me is how ill prepared these journalists were. We live in a day and age where just about everything imaginable is done to see to it that people are kept safe. We have seat belts and airbags in our cars. We have accident-free toys for our kids. It was not always thus. Those over the age of forty in

Our soldiers go through six months of basic training before they are allowed into a war zone. They have bulletproof helmets and vests, they carry weapons to defend themselves, they learn communications, tactics, how to kill or capture an enemy, how to avoid coming under enemy fire, how to call in reinforcements. They are also trained to peak physical condition.

Our journalists, sent to a "war correspondent" school outside London for a few days, learn none of that. They carry microphones, cameras and TV equipment. They have no means of defending themselves. I simply cannot understand how a newspaper or TV network, or even our government, can send young reporters into a place to risk their lives without proper preparation. The number of those who died speaks for itself.

I watched, during the third week of the war, after the statue of Hussein was toppled in Baghdad, a CNN exclusive — we are breaking this news for the first time, the reporter said on the air — that the right hand man of Saddam Hussein had warned CNN before the war that there would be "terminal consequences" for CNN reporters if they said anything against this country can easily remember a time when an accident meant you went through the windshield or a crib meant you or your brother might get your head caught between the slats and have to have to be rescued by the fire department.

Iraq. If CNN revealed the existence of this threat, the Iraqi government would actively reach out for CNN staffers in Iraq for "terminal consequences." You heard it here, now that the statue was down, for the first time, on CNN. And yes, we did tell our reporters about it ahead of time and we insisted it not affect their reporting.

As for the reporters themselves, their being in this war zone at great personal danger to themselves — far more danger than the coalition soldiers, as it turns out — is being treated like a game. In a recent report in Newsday, the editors there issued a "report card" on the various networks and the journalists who were sent in. There were those who "clearly earned their stripes," and there were those who, either wittingly or unwittingly, gave aid and comfort to the enemy, damn their souls, and were summarily fired. The essence of the "report card" was that some news organizations gave spectacular performances and got high ratings. Others were a muddle, or worse, "missed the start of the war," and so forth and so on. One could almost feel the excitement building toward the "Polk Awards," held every year in honor of George Polk, who died while covering a war long ago and far away. With such awards are hard-drinking foreign correspondents made.

Please understand that I am not arguing against up close and personal coverage of a war with which our country is involved. Such coverage, if properly done, is a good thing. I am arguing that those journalists up on the front lines should be very carefully trained over a long period of time so they can protect themselves and remain safe. And those who do not have this training should be relegated to behind the front lines coverage.

This is the least we can do for the families of those journalists who go abroad to war zones, and for the journalists themselves, whether they like it or not, macho-type defenders of the first amendment notwithstanding. •

Guns, Shoppers, Men In Masks And A Capture In A Southampton Parking Lot

By Dan Rattiner

I was coming out of a store in a shopping center on County Road 39 in Southampton when suddenly people in the parking lot started screaming.

"He's got a gun! He's got a gun! Everybody get down!" a woman with a very loud voice shouted.

I looked around. I didn't see anybody with a gun. But people were huddling down behind and between cars. I took the hint. I ran to the nearest two cars parked side by side and squatted down there alongside three other people.

"There's another man! He's got a gun, too!"

All this happened last Thursday afternoon, April 17, two days before I am writing this and eight days before Dan's Papers readers are going to see it. It is a true story. And though I have been asked to keep the exact location of this place secret, I can tell you it was a perfectly fine shopping center where one would never expect to see this sort of thing. And it was real.

"Oh my God, oh my God!" a woman shouted. A man next to me raised his head up to see. Nobody shot at him. I raised my head up to see. I saw nothing.

"Get DOWN!" somebody shrieked at me.

"Where it is? Where is it?" I asked. I got down.

I would estimate I spent no more than thirty seconds squatted down between those cars. But it seemed like ten times as long as that. I was not, for some reason, frightened. The whole situation seemed so unreal. A beautiful day in Southampton. Shopping bags. A busy parking lot with cars whizzing by on the main street nearby, the people in the cars oblivious to what was going on. What was going on? It occurred to me that I could get shot by a bullet going UNDER either of these two cars. I moved so that the tires of the parked cars would stop any shot from hitting me under the cars. I had no defense if someone were to fire between the cars, however.

Though I wasn't frightened, my hands were trembling. Why was that? It was such a wonderful day. Temperatures in the sixties. The familiar landscape of our small towns. Was I about to die? I thought of Columbine, of a crazy man, of terrorism. I was helpless. Totally not in control. Something was about to blow up.

"They've all got guns. They're fighting with each other!" the woman with the loud voice screamed. "Oh my God, oh my God. Stay down!" I stayed. Time passed. "They're fighting! Oh my God! He's on the ground!"

For some reason, on my part of the ground there, I began to think that maybe I was geter man, who was bent forward, his back to me. Next to him was a car, the rear side door open. They were doing something with this man, talking to him, in preparation for putting him into the back seat there.

One of the men in black had a .45 — I recognized it — glinting in the sun. That was the only gun I saw at this time. All the men wore ski masks pulled over their heads, black sweaters and pants and black shoes and jackets. On the back of the jackets, in white lettering, were the words STATE POLICE.

THEY HAVE THESE COSTUMES, I thought. Maybe they are FAKING being the police. About twenty feet away, there were three other men in black, surrounding another man. They were putting handcuffs on him. ONLY THE POLICE HAVE HANDCUFFS I thought. I also thought NOT A SHOT HAS BEEN FIRED. Yet.

The man nearest to me, the one surrounded by the five men, now turned halfway around so I could see his face. I knew him. I had seen him when I was going into the store. He had been standing by it, right by the glass entry slider, and he was on his cell phone. And I remember thinking — it's a beautiful day. EVERYONE should be outdoors standing in the sun like this.

Now someone put his hand on this man's head and they lowered him down and slid him into the back seat of the car. Police. An unmarked car. The other man was being walked to another unmarked car. They were arresting these people.

Everywhere in the lot, people were standing up now from between the cars, talking excitedly about what they had just witnessed. There were perhaps fifty people all together who had seen what was going on and who had been within earshot of that very loud woman. And there she was, right next to me.

"They came from everywhere, these masked men!" she said. "This man drove up in a car. And he started to get out. And then all these men with guns just rushed out from hiding places and converged on him. They had been here waiting for him and the other guy, too."

I looked around. The men in black were still there, one of them now on a cell phone. They looked very relaxed. Elsewhere in the parking lot, people were gathering in clumps to talk about what they had just seen.

ting my clothes dirty. There was sand on the asphalt. Pebbles. Oil. It was the strangest thing.

"They've got him! They've got him! And the other guy, too!" somebody said.

We stayed where we were. We needed some kind of "all clear." There was none. But then, one at a time, people began to get to their feet. I got to my feet.

"Where? Where is it?" I yelled.

ONLY THE POLICE HAVE HANDCUFFS I thought. I also thought NOT A SHOT
HAS BEEN FIRED. Yet.

Somebody pointed. I had been looking north. What was going on was to the east of north. In the road parallel to the shopping center, right in front of the stores, there were six masked men dressed entirely and identically in black. They had surrounded a small-

Business (continued from previous page)

"How could they do this?" a man asked. "How could they let us come in and out if there were a dangerous situation, if they were waiting for these two men?"

But the answer was obvious. This was a capture of some very dangerous people, potentially armed. Somehow they had to be taken into custody. The parking lot had to look as normal as possible.

Over by the men in black, about ten feet away from them, I now saw a woman crying. Perhaps a girlfriend. But then I saw she was in a shopkeeper's uniform. A uniform from one of the stores. She had come out of that store.

Things were settling down now. The car, with the man and the five men in black in it, now drove away. The other car drove away. Now another man in uniform came out of one of the stores. I walked over to him. He was talking to a woman.

"Do you know what we just saw?" she asked.

"Yes, I do," he said.

"Were these terrorists?" she asked.

I thought of the man I had seen. God help me, but I tried to imagine him as a Muslim terrorist. He did not look like one. He looked swarthy and rough. But there was nothing Middle Eastern about him. God forgive me, but in my mind I was racial profiling.

"This had to do with drugs," the man said. "Did you see there was a man standing in the front of my store reading a newspaper? He was a plainclothesman, part of the narcotics unit."

"I didn't see him," the woman said.

Nor had I. Whatever he had been reading, it was not Dan's Papers.

I found my car. No bullet holes. I drove away. My hands were still shaking, like two pigeons on the steering wheel. This had been an experience and I would not soon forget it. Also, it would transform my thinking about the Hamptons.

My only frame of reference for this was the four months I lived in Guatemala during the revolution there and I thought about that. Soldiers everywhere. Men with machine guns guarding the entrances to banks. I had seen a 12-year-old boy in a windbreaker hefting a machine gun and guarding the entrance to a supermarket there one day.

I was in Guatemala four months and after awhile I got used to it. Sort of. But that was Central America. I never thought I would see it here, see it in the Hamptons, the fabulous, peaceful Hamptons where the loudest sound is the pock of a racket hitting a tennis ball. But there it was. Thursday, April 17, in a shopping center parking lot on a main street in Southampton. We live in new times.

The next day, yesterday, I telephoned the State Police and told them of what I had been through and that, as the editor of Dan's Papers, they could tell me whatever. Freedom of the Press and so forth. They told me it was indeed the State Narcotics Undercover Unit, and one of the men had been arraigned that morning and was being held on half a million dollars bail. I asked if that meant they had found what they wanted and he said he couldn't tell me that but a half a million dollars bail speaks for itself. He also asked that specific information about the location of this occurrence not be revealed in my article. I told him I would respect that.

For awhile, I thought I ought to not write

WHY DAN DOES NOT PLAY FOR THE KnICKS

Courtside

Living The Good Life At A Game At Madison Square Garden

By Dan Rattiner

I got a call the other day from Dan Schoenberg, the public relations director of the New York Knicks basketball team. He had read something I had written about in the paper and wanted to do something about it.

"You wrote that you play your own private basketball game every day and pretend it is the Knicks versus the Nets. And you root for the Nets. I want you to come to a Knicks game. Be my guest."

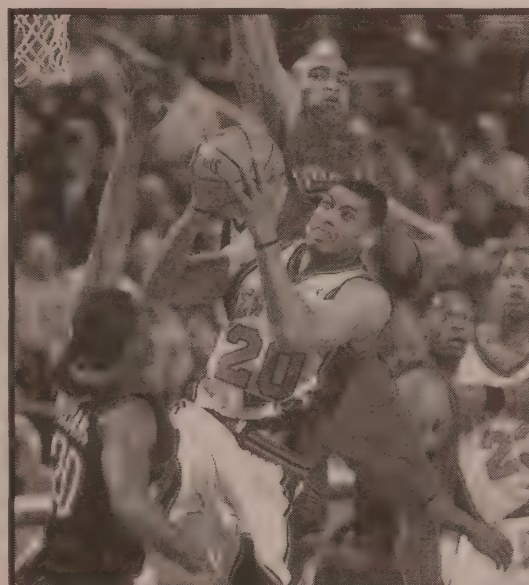

The game I play is in the backyard of my East Hampton house. I have a hoop and a net and every morning I go out there alone and shoot baskets. The first shot is taken by the Nets, the second one is by the Knicks. And so forth and so on. I make a game out of it, playing for both teams, but what this really is is my exercise program. I do this twenty minutes every morning. Wears me out. And though I try to score with every shot, I root for the Nets.

"If it's any consolation," I told Dan, "the Knicks have won the last five games in a row."

The last game was 71 to 58. There were three three-point shots I made. Also two foul shots. Latrell Sprewell starred. But I don't want to go into that. It's really kinda nuts, playing this 20-minute game all by myself every morning. But I told Dan, sure, I'd love to come watch the Knicks.

We got to the Garden around 6 p.m. on the appointed evening, two hours before the game, and we looked for a nice place to eat nearby first. We walked around. But everything we saw was either too grand or fast food. Finally we located a place INSIDE the Garden near where you get your tickets, but they wouldn't let us in. It was for club members only, people who had spent a lot for front row seats. They could get in.

Resigned to a dinner of a couple of hot dogs, we got our tickets, only to discover that Mr. Schoenberg had left us front row seats. So we went back to the club, and participated, for $35, in this sort of wedding banquet buffet. It included shrimp and lobster cocktail, veal, several kinds of chicken, including one where the chef sautéed it to order, and all sorts of salads and desserts. Then we went to our seats down front, arriving just as they were introducing the players. The game started just a minute later.

It is an amazing experience, sitting courtside. I recommend it.

First of all, it's like being on the court itself. You can hear the players shouting back and forth to one another, you can hear the squeak of the sneakers and the sound of the collisions as they bump into one another. It's a physical game. Sweat sprays everywhere. A time out is called. The men with the mops come out. Play resumes. The players are yelling at the refs. The refs are talking among themselves. "Look, none of us saw it so that's it." Huge leaps result in delicate shots that go swish. Wow.

These ballplayers, between six- and seven-foot tall, are the best in the world at what they do. For a backyard shooter like me, who shouts "yes" and pumps his fist in the air whenever he can get the ball to swish clean through the net, I had this overwhelming urge to take off my clothes, reveal my skintight Superman suit and get out there and play with them. I resisted this urge. But there it was.

The reason for this urge was that right there at courtside, as a red-blooded American, I really DID want to get out there and see if I could block those unbelievable moves, those around-the-back passes, those drives for the baskets, and those great, arching three-pointers from the baseline. I absolutely knew those guys would leave me flat-footed. I just wanted to be out there.

As the game for itself, it was supposed to be a walkover. The Philadelphia 76ers, fighting for first place as the end of the season approached, would be at the top of their game. The Knicks, already eliminated from contention, were just playing out the season. It didn't matter one bit if they won or lost. So why should they try?

Well, boy did they try. For themselves, for the coaches, for the fans, who had packed the joint with signage and cheers, chants and applause, or perhaps just for the fun of the game itself, they just wouldn't give this game up.

The way it works in basketball is that one team generally pulls ahead of the other team, then the team behind alters their style of play and either falls further behind — so far behind that the game is effectively over — or they pull themselves back into it. In this game, BOTH teams would not let the other pull ahead. Any time a team got even four or five points ahead, the other team fought harder and came back. And so it went right through toward the end of the last quarter. It would come down to who wanted it the most. And why, WHY, would the Knicks want it? I turned to a guy shouting at the top of his lungs for the 76ers behind me and persuaded him to take a $10 bet. No spread. Even.

The defining moment of this game came with about a minute to play, the Knicks ahead by two. The Knicks had the ball, but a shot was missed and there was this great fight for the ball under the basket. Perhaps five players went down and the ball popped out and rolled slowly toward the sidelines. Everyone saw it. It was going out of bounds. But Sprewell wouldn't let it. He sprinted over, got it just before it rolled out of bounds, turned and, unguarded, arched a three-point jump shot swish through the basket. The crowd, totally for the Knicks, howled with joy. And the 76ers, though still standing, just sagged. Now down by five, this was not going to be their night.

During halftime, and at time outs, a group of pretty young girls in spangles and tights came out to mid-court to precision dance to rock music. There were tumblers. A series of dog racers. A brief interval when a fan was selected to try to drop three foul shots in thirty seconds for $5,000. (He failed.)

And down front with us courtside in these folding chairs were all sorts of well-known people watching the proceedings. These included Ed Bradley from 20/20, rap star Jay-Z, the actress-singer Beyonce and actress Linda Hamilton. Also in the front row was Herman Edwards, the much-loved coach of the New York Jets. He watched the action very carefully, but like the great stone face that he wears on the sidelines of the football field, no matter what happened, he expressed no emotion whatsoever.

It was a great evening. At the end of the game, after all this energy on the court, and all this rooting and cheering throughout this packed house, I was climbing the stairs toward one of the exits when I saw a Knicks sign: ONE CITY. ONE TEAM. KNICKS. And that sort of sums it up.

I've been to the Meadowlands to watch the Nets. They were an expansion team. Early on, there were thin times out there when they didn't win much. And more recently there have been richer times, particularly with Jason Kidd on the court. Indeed, the Nets are the team that the 76ers are chasing. So if the Knicks are down in the dumps, which they have been for the last few years, they nevertheless did their cross-town rivals a favor, taking a cut out of the 76ers. But they didn't do it for them, I guarantee. They did it for themselves, for their pride and for the fans, who at Madison Square Garden are simply amazing.

Playing in my backyard in East Hampton the following morning, I had a new respect for the Knicks. And they won again, 66 to 63. Jason tried hard. But it wasn't enough. What's the matter with those Nets?

Flag Anxiety

An American Flag On A 35-Foot Pole Is A Surprise Gift In Westhampton

By Janet Berg

We just moved into a new house, which we had built for us. For over two years, it was a full-time job of designing every nook and cranny, picking out every minuscule detail you can imagine, every nut, bolt, and screw, every hinge, knob and faucet that you'd ever come across in a lifetime. It also entailed many meetings with plumbers, electricians, landscapers, and so on and so on and so on.

Recently, we reached this plateau — a time to relax and enjoy the new house and our life — a time to rejoice. Spring is in the air (well, kind of), and we can finally kick back. Ahhh. That is until yesterday, when we find a huge flag-pole on our front lawn. Our builder, Mike DeChiaro, left us a 35-foot high gift, with a substantial American flag, waving hello to us in the wind. I must say, it was a breathtaking sight to discover.

Our entire family, including my sister and mother, get out of our car in slow motion with our mouths agape, circling it, and just staring up at it for awhile. Of course, since 9-11, and with the war in Iraq, we were quite moved, indeed, and have never felt more patriotic. In fact, we were quite choked-up by the whole thing.

Somebody starts reciting "The Pledge of Allegiance" and we all join in automatically. Following the pledge, someone else starts singing the "National Anthem." Again, the rest of us follow along. On one hand, we were laughing at the situation, but on the other hand, we all got quite serious about it, and very respectful of what the flag symbolizes.

Okay, a short time passes after the impromptu ceremony and we pile into the car to go out to dinner at a nice restaurant. We're slowly exiting

"Yeah, like how to take it down and put it back up."

My husband, Bruce, suddenly has this realization come over his beet-red face. "Oh, that's right," I think, "there are a lot of rules and regulations when you own a flag."

My sister breaks into this wheezing — that's how she laughs when she's nervous. "This is more responsibility than we thought. It's like having another pet."

"Like, yeah," my daughter chimes in, "especially when your pet is a St. Bernard. I mean this flag is HUGE. And what will our new neighbors think if we do it wrong?"

"They may deport us. Or worse yet, report us to the American Legion Hall."

My sister claims, "You know, now that I think about it, don't you have to lower it by dusk?"

"WHAT?" I ask. "But, we're eating out. What if we're in the middle of our Chateaubriand?"

Grandma: "Oh, we're eating French?"

My sister wheezes again. "That'll really be unpatriotic. Don't let the neighbors see you then."

My daughter's solution: "Maybe we should eat fast, like Chinese."

"Well, whatever," I continue, "what if we're in our driveway, glancing back at the new flag that has become a part of our family. We get, maybe, 50 feet or so, and my daughter upsets the applecart, or should I say causes an "issue" when she asks, "Dad, do you know how to work the flag?"

Out of nowhere, everyone in our overcrowded car has this chain reaction of "flag anxiety."

"Work it?" he asks.

One of the most beloved clerical figures in the Hamptons today is a man in his late fifties, who presides over the Greek Orthodox Church of the Hamptons. When people speak about him, and members of the church include Dr. Peter Michalos, Margo and John Catsimatides and many other successful men and women in communities both here and in Manhattan, they talk about his remarkable presence, his sense of humor and his great compassion. There are few men that I have met that are so full of life, so filled with the delight of it.

Father Alex Karloutsos, who is 58, has served in this position for the past five years, working part time here and part time in the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese in Manhattan, which is the very epicenter of this religion in Manhattan. Early on in his ministry in Southampton, he commuted to Manhattan from his home in Pelham Manor, New York, but in the last year he has moved to Southampton full time where he is overseeing the planning and construction of a brand new and larger church to replace the present one.

"Our parish is growing," he said. "Right now we have 170 families year round, but residents from other Orthodox communities are joining up. We have Russian Orthodox, Antiochian, Czech, Romanian, Ukranian members. In the summer, we have about 550 additional worshippers."

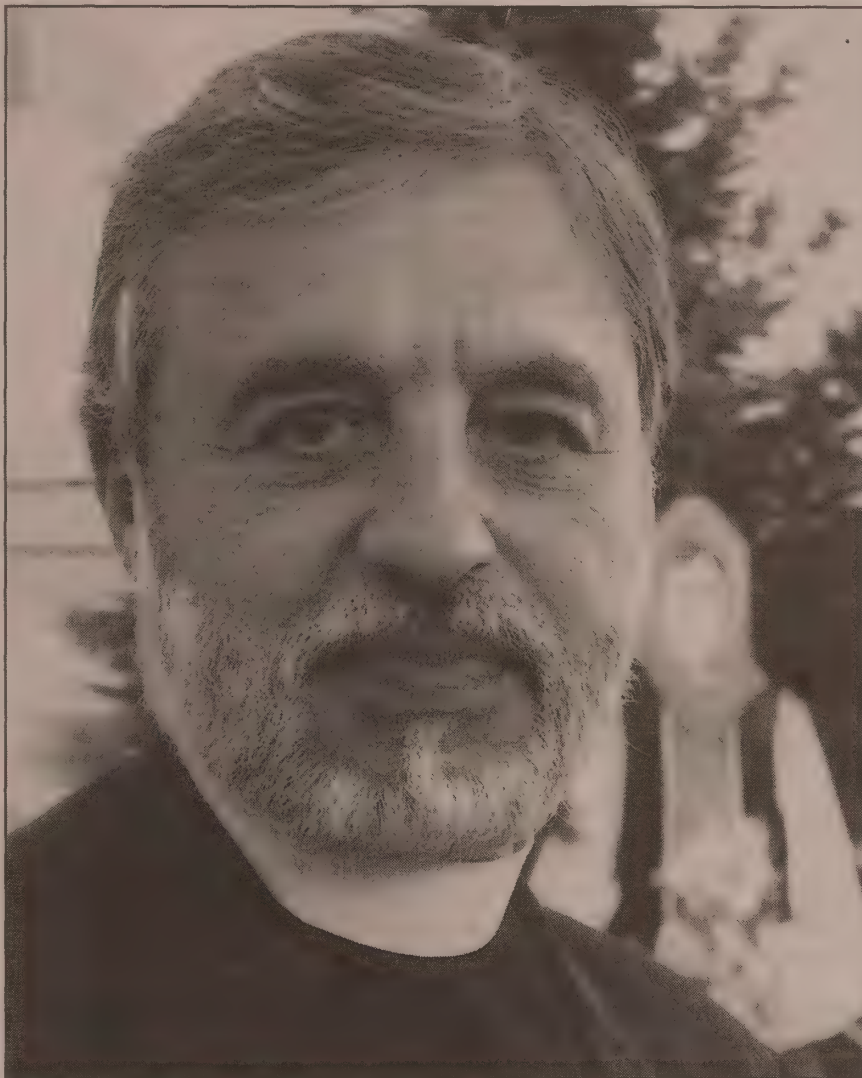

The new church, designed by the well known Manhattan architect Costas Kondylis — also a member — will be in the fully Byzantine tradition, with a dome three times the size of the present one. It will be built on the same campus as the old, which is just to the west of Southampton College, and the old church will become a community center.

Father Alex was born in Pyrgos, Peloponesis, Greece near Olympia, but was brought to New York by his father and mother as a baby. His father served as a priest there. At the time they moved, the Second World War had just ended and a revolution had broken out in Greece, fomented by the Communists. Alex's father decided to move the family to America. Within a week, he, his wife and four young children were here.

"How could your father do that?" I asked.

"My father, who was also a priest, for a long time thought he was a Greek citizen. But then he made this remarkable discovery. All

Who's Here

Fr. Alex Karloutsos Priest

he had to do was get his American passport. It is a fascinating story. And I am probably the only man the eastern end of Long Island who had a father who was sold for $500."

I was interviewing Father Alex at Bobby Van's Restaurant in Bridgehampton. His eyes in the late 1800s. But then my father's mother passed away, and my father's father felt he could not handle raising my dad alone. He moved in with his parents there in Springfield, and decided to return to Turkey to find a new wife. While he was away my father's paternal grandmother sold my dad for $500 to a Greek woman from Philadelphia who could not have children. This was about 1919, and, hard as it may seem to believe, immigrant parents sometimes did this. This woman in Philadelphia, who subsequently also moved back to Greece was who I considered my real grandmother. In the end, of course, my dad, living in Greece, found he had American citizenship."

Alex's father moved back with HIS family, his wife and four children to Springfield and took up the ministry in the Orthodox Church there. Two more children were born, a younger sister and brother for Alex, but then his father's wife died. And Alex's father, at age 35, with six children to raise, yet unable to remarry because Orthodox law permits Orthodox priests to marry only once, became a preacher, moving from parish to parish around the country.

"I grew up all over the United States," Alex said. "My dad would stay in a town two or three years. We went to Detroit, then to Baird, Nebraska, then to Charleston, West Virginia, then to Middletown, Ohio, then to Concord, New Hampshire, then to Jamestown, New York."

Somehow through it all, Alex, his five brothers and sisters and his widowed dad survived it all. Alex graduated high school, and decided that he, too, would become a priest. He went to Hellenic College/Holy Cross Seminary in Brookline, Massachusetts, where he received his BA and Masters degrees, graduating in 1966, and then took an ecumenical studies degree at the Bossey Institute of the University of Geneva in Switzerland. He was then offered a full scholarship to the Sorbonne in Paris to get a Ph.D.

But fate intervened.

"A friend of mine from the seminary was getting married in Washington, D.C. I went to the wedding, and there, scheduled to go down the aisle with a bridesmaid, I saw another bridesmaid. Our eyes met. I would go with the second bridesmaid. I am with her today."

Thus Father Alex came to marry Xanthi. He stayed in America.

He took a pass on the Sorbonne.

"My first assignment was to a parish in the inner city of Chicago. It was a tough neighborhood and it suffered from a big problem. There were hardly any members of the sparkled with glee as he leaned forward to tell me this remarkable story.

"My father was born of Greek parents in Springfield, Massachusetts. His parents had come from Izmir, Turkey, where there was a large Greek population, migrating to America Church. I recommended that the Parish move and advocated the church building's sale to Elijah Muhammad. The sale went through and for a long time Mr. Mohammed used this religious edifice as his national headquarters."

Father Alex was soon named as the youth director for the diocese of Chicago.

"During this time, I got to know Mayor Daly," Father Alex said. "I had given a eulogy that he attended and afterwards he came up to me and shook my hand and told me he liked it. 'I'll have somebody call you,' he said. I wasn't sure I liked that but I thought about it. The phone call came. But in the end, I decided that working with the mayor was too attractive, and too dangerous."

Father Alex stayed in the Chicago diocese though, and was shortly reassigned to the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese in New York as national youth director. He was 30 years old.

"I have been to the Oval Office with fellow clerics and have met every President since Jimmy Carter," he told me. "I liked President Carter very much. His humanity is very real. I got a big kick out of Ronald Reagan. He had a great way about him and made me feel very much at home. After my first meeting with him, I asked him if I could have some of the jelly beans he had on his desk for my children so I could show them I had been there. 'I have a gift for you,' he said, smiling, and calling an aide. The aide went off and returned with a glass jar full of them and with the Presidential seal embossed on the outside. 'That should do it,' he said. He was a very gracious man. Very thoughtful.

"I am also friends with Bill Clinton and George Bush Sr. I know George W. Bush.

Father Alex greeted George W. Bush at Ground Zero.

"It was a few days after the attack on the World Trade Center. I had moved to Manhattan and was working at the Archdiocese there as the assistant to Archbishop Demetrios, and as the representative of the Archbishop of St. Nicholas Church, the little church, and the only church destroyed in the attack of 9/11. I'm also a Port Authority Police Chaplain. And so Xanthi and I drove down the day after the towers came down. It was like a Godzilla movie, a total mess, it was Armageddon. But there were heroes there, men and women who had looked death in the face, and it felt as if there was something greater than yourself there. I was there, standing behind George W. Bush when he stood up there with the bullhorn.

"Can you hear me?" he said. 'I can hear you, the American people can hear you. The whole world can hear you and those that did this will hear from us soon,' he said. Then he walked down the row of officials and when he came to me he embraced me. He needed it, I think. He said 'Thanks for your prayers.'"

Subsequently, Father Alex was appointed to the memorial program committee by Governor Pataki. His other job is to raise money for the rebuilding of St. Nicholas Church from the Orthodox Community.

"Religious leaders from every religion are involved with this. You know where the first money came from? The American Jewish Committee. They contributed the largest amount. The second largest amount came from the Emir of Qatar. The third largest amount came from the Plumbers Union of America. Isn't that something?"

One of the things Father Alex is most proud of involves Camp David. He was privileged to work on a plan to build a non-denominational chapel there. Because of the separation of church and state, it could not be done with government funds. But George Bush Sr. had asked that one be built at the camp. And so a committee of religious leaders was formed. There was a representative from each of the largest religions in the country. A Protestant, a Catholic, a Jew, an Orthodox Christian.

"Jim Rudin was named the leader of the Jewish fundraising group," Father Alex said. "He was somebody I knew. I was the leader of the Orthodox Christian group. Our goal was $300,000 each, with a total goal of $1.2 million. We achieved it. The chapel was built. I was there at the dedication. George Bush Sr., with tears in his eyes, spoke about receiving this on behalf of the people of the United States. It was very emotional."

Father Alex was assigned to the Ecumenical Patriarchate of Constantinople when, in the early 1990s, President Bill Clinton and his wife Hillary visited Istanbul to visit the Ecumenical Patriarchate — where the patriarch presides. Father Alex explained that originally, when the church was founded there were five ancient sees. Rome, Constantinople, Jerusalem, Alexandria and Antioch. The Antioch see has since been moved to Damascus. Alexandria has moved much of its activities to Cairo. All the others remain where they are, except Rome, which has become the Vatican headquarters for the Pope.

"Worldwide, there are 300 million members of the Orthodox Church. For more than a thousand years, from 330 a.d. until 1453 a.d., the Byzantine empire held sway in the world. No other Western empire has lasted so long.

"From 1992 to 1996, I served in Istanbul as the assistant to the Ecumenical Patriarch Bartholomew. After this stint in Istanbul, I was reassigned by His Holiness back to New York

York to complete the journey. The ACHILLES arrived in Sag Harbor towing a lighter, (a smaller ship), called the MARTHA STEWART (!), which had taken aboard the chains, anchors, rigging and sails from the CATHERINE.

Three people from the CATHERINE chose to remain in East Hampton and lived out the rest of their lives here. They were Patrick Lynch, an Irishman who had been bound for the gold fields of San Francisco until the wreck, whose descendants are still here today, and Captain Heselton, the master of the CATHERINE, who remained on with his wife. Two years after the wreck, his wife died, and there was a THANK YOU notice in the CORRECTOR from him to all the people of Amagansett who had expressed such kindness in looking after her in her final days.

Most of the above information, by the way, comes from the definitive book on shipwrecks on Long Island, written half a century ago by Jeanette Rattray, the grandmother of the current publisher of the East Hampton Star newspaper, David Rattray.

At the time of the wreck of the CATHERINE, the people of these parts farmed and fished and went about their business. There was excitement in Sag Harbor almost every day to be sure — people from all over the world talking in a dozen different languages, drunks, whalers, slaves, men from the South Seas, prostitutes.

Down by the ocean, with the fishing and farming, things were quiet. Except when shipwrecks occurred.

The CATHERINE came shore in 1851. Here is what wrecked during the decade before it, typical of every decade during the 19th century when ships came ashore here at the rate of about one a year. That was the excitement.

In April, 1842, the French square rigger LOUIS PHILIPPE wrecked in Mecox. No lives were lost. The cargo was trees, dry goods and champagne. A whaling ship called PLATO came ashore at Montauk in 1842. In March 1844, the brig REBECCA C. FISHER out of Puerto Rico bound for New Haven wrecked at the Shinnecock Inlet. No lives lost. Cargo was molasses and sugar. In March, 1846, 100 Irish immigrants aboard the SUSAN came ashore at Southampton. In December 1846, the brig ROLLA, out of Salem Mass. and bound for South Africa came ashore in a storm, all its masts broken, at Canoe Place in Shinnecock. The crew was saved, the vessel and cargo a total loss.

In March 1847, a vessel without a name came up on the rocks at Montauk on the North side. Six lives lost. In 1847, the ship ASHLAND, with several hundred on board, wrecked in Southampton. All saved. In November 1848, the cargo ship KETCHABONAC foundered in Westhampton with a cargo of flour and corn. On March 3, 1849, a ship broke up at Montauk, its name never known, and six bodies washed ashore. They were buried at Amagansett.

And just sixty days before the loss of the CATHERINE, the bark HENRY, out of London, shipwrecked at Mecox. All on board, 104 people, were saved. The cargo, chalk and linseed oil, was a total loss.

When ships wrecked at the beach, the bells in the church towers were rung, the people came down to the shore, the schools let out.

The Wreck Master, by the way, was a government appointee, someone local, whose job it was to sort out who got what cargo. In theory, it belonged to businessmen in New York City who had paid to receive it. But often, if it laid unclaimed, or certain events happened during the night, it wound up in the possession of the local people.

If any of this interests you, you might want to go to the library and research what happened to the cargo of the JOHN MILTON, a merchant clipper ship out of the Chincha Islands in Peru that wrecked on the beach five miles west of the Montauk Lighthouse in 1858 bearing a cargo of guano. That's pigeon droppings to you landlubbers.

We went down to the wreck again around 5 p.m., two hours before low tide, to take some pictures of it, yet allow us enough time to get an early dinner at Nick & Toni's and see the play a "The Nerd" at the John Drew Theater at 8.

The shipwreck was almost gone. It had been plainly visible in the afternoon at high tide, and now it was barely visible at low tide at 5 p.m. Go figure.

We got home about 11 p.m. There was a message from Stuart Vorpahl on our answering machine.

"Went down there," he said. "It's just about gone. Hope you got pictures of it."

Well, we had. A visit from a century and a half ago, still making an occasional appearance on the beach in Amagansett.

You changed our lives.

Before we bought the Marquis Spa from you, our lives were completely boring. My husband was never home, he worked 18 hours a day at his law firm.

To keep busy, I jogged, joined volunteer groups, shopped 'til I dropped.

We never saw each other. It was terrible.

Since you installed the spa, our lives have really changed.

The warm water bubbling from those therapeutic heads completely relaxes us.

Look at this picture. We spent a fortune on different backdrops to fit our every mood. This one is a wooded lake. Another one is a deserted tropical beach. And another is...well it's just too personal to talk about.

Now we spend all of our time together, in our new spa.

Its wonderful... except he stopped going to work and lost his job.

If I can get him out of the spa, can you give him a job?

Anxiety (continued from page 27)

the middle of our pu pu platter and it starts to get dark out, do we have to run out of the restaurant and speed home to lower it?"

"Are there flag police?" someone else asks in a panicky voice.

Grandma: "Maybe there's a manual under the flagpole somewhere."

Now, I can tell my husband is getting nervous, because he's starting to break out in hives. "That did it!" he yells. "We're turning around. Let's go back and take the flag down."

"Hmm, flag etiquette. I'm going to research this," my daughter decides. She runs into the house and leaves the rest of us outside under the pole. My husband, Bruce, tries to maneuver the cord to bring it down, and grandma is below it, trying to catch it.

My daughter comes out of the house, reading section 101 and 102 of title 5, United States code, or something like that, and commends her grandmother.

"That's right Grandma. It says here, that it should be received by waiting hands and arms."

"What else do the rules say?" someone yells impatiently.

"It says it should be hung vertically with union to north... other flags should be smaller, none larger, ya da, ya da, ya da... Listen, it even has rules and regulations on how to hold the flag."

Meanwhile, my husband is having trouble with the cord and cannot get the flag down. I see he's losing his patience as he always does when he's getting hungry.

"I can't do this," he blurts out abruptly. "I'm Jewish. I'm not handy!"

"You don't have to be Bob Vila to own the American flag," I retort.

Grandma cautions that Bruce may rip the flag if he keeps tugging at it, the way he is, and my daughter adds, "Good thing you're a seamstress, grandma, 'cause its got this whole section in here on mending the flag."

We learn there's even more stress to deal with. There's a special way to "carry" it and "fold" it. It should always be arranged with the blue above, the white in the middle, and the red below.

My husband's stomach is starting to growl now, and so is he, so we all try to help him with the flag, but the spring wind is whipping around us.

"Uh-oh," Aunt Judy says, "I think the union is no longer vertical. It's backwards, and that's not standard. What about if you're dyslexic though?"

"Yikes, it says not to fly the flag in inclement weather. But, the weather changes so frequently. I think we're going to be spending an awful lot of time driving back and forth this year, especially on all those important days, like Inauguration Day, Martin Luther King Jr.'s Birthday, Lincoln's and Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, definitely on Flag Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Constitution Day, Columbus Day, Veteran's Day, and... we can never go too far from home."

"What if you're on vacation? Would our new neighbors do it for us?" I ask.

She continues reading: "It says that it should be displayed in or near every polling place on Election Day."

"That's not specific enough. How near is near?"

"If you think that's confusing, wait 'till you read about the half-staff rules. You have to hoist it to the peak for an instant and then..."

"What do they mean by that? Who understands this flag terminology? You have to take a college course in Flag 101."

Grandma: "Would it be disrespectful to exchange it for a smaller size?"

"Then it would be too small for that big pole," I tell her.

"Here we go," my daughter reads on. "There is a legal solution — you can LIGHT it."

Grandma: "With a match?"

"No. No, grandma. That's just to dispose of one that is old and frayed. I mean, you can shine a light on it. Otherwise, the only place the flag can fly 24 hours a day is on the moon. Oh, yeah, and at Betsy Ross' House."

"Hey Dad, do you know about the Salute?"

"The flag is turning out to be almost as stressful as building the house," my husband announces with his own salute that wasn't too politically correct.

"No, that's not it Dad."

But, then, something funny happened, as we all had our hands on the flag together. We all got quiet. We stood out on the front lawn, just one American family, trying to help each other fold the flag in the proper way. The red, white and blue looking magically brilliant at dusk, symbolizing not only how much we worship our freedom, but our "right" to have a sense of humor about it. God bless America, this country we truly love.

Now, let's eat.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #245

MashomArk

The North Ferry Company has gotten a big new ferry dubbed the Mashomack. It holds five hundred cars! In order to save money, the company had the ferry built from some classic old and well-tested boat plans.

The new ferry measures 200 cubits by 50 cubits. It's 30 cubits high, drawing only 10 cubits water and is guaranteed to be unsinkable regardless of tidal changes. It was built by Bob Noah and Sons, Shipbuilders and Chandlers since 10,000 B.C.

It has all the latest design improvements. The entrance ramp is a doublewide, so cars load on in a two by two fashion. The deck is coated with a non-skip tarp. There's a nice snack bar below the wheelhouse.

In the event of machine failure, there is a manual backup system so that the ferry keeps going no matter what. Below the car deck is a rowing galley. It seats a hundred people, fifty on each-side sitting two abreast. Just under the top deck is a row of portals on each side that flip open to allow the rowers to extend the oars. This will be so great in summer when people are trying to stay healthy. You can park your car on deck, go downstairs to the nice cool galley and get chained to the oar of your choice, window or aisle seat. You get a terrific cardiac workout while you enjoy watching seagulls paddle by your portal. The scent and feel of salt water dousing you now and then with the odd wave is delightful. Additionally, rowing has been approved by the Shelter Island Town Council for those hours of community service that many Island revelers must complete. How many times can you combine community service with exercise on the water? It is such a progressive concept, I bet even East Hampton hasn't even thought of it.

The rowing galley does have a few drawbacks that I should probably mention. First, it's a dry galley, no drinking allowed. Past experiences with other ferry galleys where alcohol was served proved that the ferry gets rowed around in circles going nowhere in particular until it gets jammed up on land somewhere. Everybody thinks they know where they are going and pretty soon fights break out and people start hitting each other with the oars and it drives the insurance rates through the deck. Marijuana is definitely not allowed because then nobody rows at all and nobody cares about anything except raiding the snack bar. Cocaine is completely out unless you're on the express ferry to Florida in three days. Espresso is the only beverage served on the Shelter Island galleys, in large cups, with extra sugar. Decaffeinated espresso is not available because it's like crotchless panties, interesting, but what's the point?

Another drawback is the rowing music. The good news is, music is played in the galley to assist in the creation of a nice rowing rhythm. The bad news is, it's rap music. Multiple studies have been done and it is clear, rap is the best rowing galley music. Relaxing music makes the boat go too slow, classic rock just makes everyone sing and not pay attention to their task. Rap is perfect; it has a monotonous beat, no intelligible lyrics that can be sung along with, and the "music" is so reliably insufferable that everybody rows as fast as they can to get to Greenport so they can get out of that galley!

The MashomArk allows you to purchase special discount tickets, the 40 Days and 40 Nights pack. Two packs will cover you for the whole summer! So pack up your beach stuff, throw the kids in the trunk and head for the Island this summer with no fear of ferry lines! The infamous long ferry lines of summer are behind you now!

In 1998, Xanthi said she would like to move to the Hamptons. She had always loved the Hamptons. Xanthi and Alex, along with their three children, son Michael, daughter Anastasia and Olga, moved to Southampton.

"My son will marry this August in Constantinople to Anastasia Stogiannis," Father Alex said. "My daughter Anastasia married Fr. Constantine Lazarakis, and my other daughter Olga is getting married to Marc Palladino."

Beginning that year, Father Alex began spending four days a week in Manhattan and three days a week in Southampton. In the summertime, he would reverse those days. In the city, today, he stays at the Stanhope Hotel when he needs to stay overnight.

The drive to fund the building of the new church began three years ago, when the annual outdoor fundraising festival at the church was pretty much washed out by a driving rain.

"Everyone had worked so hard," Father Alex said. "We were pretty discouraged. But then a friend of mine and a member of the church, a successful New Yorker, said she would start things going with a donation of a million dollars. But she wanted to do it anonymously. Imagine that."

A GOLF COURSE AT "THE BRIDGE": A FAIT ACCOMPLI OR A FATE WORSE THAN DEATH?

By Catherine Gandel

For several hours last Saturday evening, the LTV Studios, on Industrial Road in East Hampton became a museum dedicated to automobile racing in general and to one race track in particular. Vintage posters hung on the black walls, an old Lotus, Mercer and MG vied for space with round tables covered in checkered-flag black-and-white tablecloths, a silent auction offered racing memorabilia, and slides projected on one wall introduced the "guest of honor," the Bridgehampton Race Circuit or the "Bridge" as the track is known by the cognoscenti, aficionados, former drivers, "car guys" and the sixty-five people who showed up for this fundraiser to "Save the Bridge."

What the group is saving the bridge from is any further progress on the golf course that is already in use up there on Scuttlehole Road. The centerpiece of the evening was billed as a "Sneak First-Edit Preview" of a documentary called "Saving the Bridge" produced and directed by Humphrey Sutherland.

The event was sponsored by the Bridgehampton Racing Heritage Group (BRHG) (www.bridgehamptonracing.com) headed by Guy Frost who, since the late 1980s, has been involved in the so far futile efforts to return the track to its former glory. When asked if "Golf at the Bridge" was not, in fact, a done deal, Frost replied that although the course itself has been completed, no new structures have been built. "You can't have a golf course without a club house," he said.

Plans for 60,000 square feet of buildings are now making their way through the Town Planning Board, and Frost sees this as the last chance to turn back the clock. BRHG's solution is for the owner of the golf course to sell the property back to a consortium of government and private entities who will reconstruct the track amidst a new public park and recreation area. Nostalgia is not reason enough to make this happen. The group's strongest argument is the potential environmental hazard to water resources from chemicals used on the greens.

Sutherland himself is more interested in encouraging respect for the track's history than in trying to stop the golf course. In an interview he admitted that he had to serve two masters and this dual loyalty shows in "Saving the Bridge." The first part of the 45-minute film is a mix of old racing footage, one lap of the track with an on-car camera and interviews with some of the men who were associated with the track during the 1970s. Locals like Bruce Stevenson, Guy Frost, Swede Amund and the late Robert Grossman, as well as racing legends like Sam Posey and John Fitch talk about what the Bridge meant to them, what an exciting challenge the track was for drivers, and what a travesty it is to turn the track into a golf course.

Then the film segues into the environmental controversy, but this legitimate and serious concern seems to belong in a whole other film. Noyac residents speak about fears that their water will become contaminated by chemicals from the golf course, not an outlandish fear given that the Noyac golf course has already produced some pollution.

The old racing footage was the most fun and makes the nostalgia argument better than all the talking heads. But nostalgia runs second to environmental and physical health as a reason to "Save the Bridge." Bottom line: the mixed message dilutes both arguments.

this article as it would alert others who might be involved in this narcotics enterprise that someone had been caught, but then I realized that with this capture, they would know that anyway. There was no reason to withhold the information.

So I write what happened. And one of the feelings I have about it is about feeling grateful. The operation went perfectly, quickly, and without any shots being fired. These could have been terrorists with bombs. These could have been people out to cause terrible things. And they got them.

Whoever says police officers don't earn their money should have seen what about fifty of us saw. They'd feel a whole lot different, seeing the dangers these officers went through, just doing their job.

WAGGING TAILS AND EASTER BONNETS

By Chris Stanley

Pups and pooches donning Easter bonnets, flamboyant costumes and imaginative outfits congregated outside Little Lucy's at 91 Jobs Lane, Southampton. The sunny, spring-like Saturday drew a crowd of doggies of all ages and varieties. Their proud stewards clustered around the façade of the intimate boutique for animal-lovers and their pets. They were anxiously waiting for the judges to select the winners of the Easter Bonnet Contest. This canine benefit for the Suffolk SPCA was only one of many such events that shop owner, Patricia Hurley had hosted since she opened the store four summers ago.

An aging little white dog wearing an antique tilted bonnet growled and snapped at her competition. A hound howled its complaints under a floppy bonnet. A costume fell apart, leaving a wire halo with attached painted Easter eggs behind on the winding sidewalk. A longhaired Dachshund shed her boa. Grace, a much-adorned Beagle, nearly lost her angelic wings. Flirtations ran rampant. Tails wagged wildly. There was much barking, pulling and attempted elopements.

With the moment of truth was upon them, the judges made their selections. The two-leggeds held their breaths, their eyes wide, ears cocked. The four-leggeds were not phased.

There were a number of categories, including: The Most Creative Dog Hat, The Most Glamorous, The Most Pet and Person Look-alike, The Best Easter Outfit, The Best Biker Outfit, The Coolest Looking Dog, The Most Ethereal and many more. Maria Tennariello, who was photographing, created a whole new category: The Best Canine Impersonator — an unlisted award for Timba, the brave, well behaved cat draped over Joanna Bell's shoulder.

Some of the winners were: Joan Crampton and her Italian Greyhound, Niko; Sophia Gianis with her angelic Beagle, Grace; Gerry Curran with Millie and Randy; Kathryn Brooke with Pomeranians, Maggie and Roscoe; Regina Sobezyk with Paradise; Kalie (dog with pink boa and purple sequin cape); and more and more.

"I couldn't have pulled it off without the help of so many, creative, arty animal-loving friends," store owner, Pat Hurley, told this reporter. "Greg Monski volunteered to be the announcer as well as one of the judges along with his wife Fay and their daughters, Ava and Alana."

Left Coast Lesson: Grapes Versus Greens In Napa Valley

Although Long Island's wine region is more often compared with Bordeaux than with Napa, there are growing similarities between the two that have little to do with wine styles and a lot to do with our future as a wine region. And it's time to pay attention.

Following on the heels of the boom 90s, a group of environmentalists in California's Napa Valley loudly and effectively protested planting methods and other land-use issues in that wine region. The "greens" argue that the monocultural (a favorite eco catch-phrase) nature of vineyards, along with run-off from controversial slope-planting, are ruining the ecology of a place Robert Louis Stevenson once claimed could produce "bottled poetry."

It all began a decade ago when a wealthy South American vineyard owner dynamited a hillside to plant vines above a reservoir that supplies the city of St. Helena. Massive run-off and erosion resulted.

But now it seems as if maybe the greens are going too far. Vineyards once regarded as the area's salvation are now being blamed by them for its demise. Add to this the pressure of commercial development (wineries are businesses, remember), for which natural forests are being denuded, and you have what author James Conaway calls the end of an "agricultural Eden."

As land available to plant vines in Napa runs out, agricultural land values are rising at astronomical rates. And that's a good thing, right? At least it seems like it should be a good thing. But in Napa, escalating ag land prices has resulted in the emergence of what Conaway refers to as tourist-driven, "Disney-esque" wineries. When vineyard purchasers have to pay so much that they are forced to "enhance the merchandise" by focus-

Dan's North Fork

I have to admit that, after the happenings of recent weeks, I am no longer a Francophile. However, the concept of bistro eating is one thing for which I will always be grateful that our erstwhile 'friends' bequeathed to the culinary world.

When Deborah Rivera decided that the high-powered worlds of investment banking and highly specialized financial consulting were not using up all of her incredible energies, she decided to buy a run-down motel, rip out the interior and turn it into a welcoming boutique hotel featuring modern rooms with beds so comfortable they have become almost legendary. She also opened a small restaurant, La Cuvee, that offered relatively light fare.

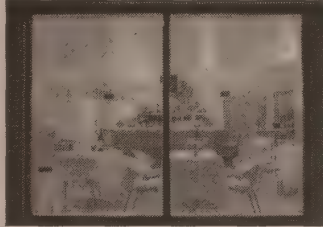

Well, sometimes projects develop an energy and life of their own and, as Deborah freely admits, this was certainly true in this case. Since its opening, La Cuvee's light snacks have been fully matched (at weekends only out of season) by a well-crafted, gourmet menu offering a wide range of dishes. By the way, Deborah, chameleon-style, doffs the Financial Executive persona as she travels out from Manhattan and emerges as the Executive Chef.

Deborah said that during the three years they have been operational, guests and patrons persuaded her to extend the menu without sacrificing the true bistro concept. They now offer everything from a cup of coffee to a glass or bottle of vintage wine, a simple croque monsieur or a full gourmet dinner based on a regularly changed small menu featuring the best of what's local from land and from sea.

The project is still ongoing and this year should see

La Cuvee Wine Bar & Bistro At The Greenporter Hotel

326 Front Street, Greenport

the completion of a new conference center, European-style spa and gym, plus an additional wing of thirteen rooms, making a total of 28.

The dining room and large horseshoe bar are the focal point of La Cuvee and the clientele ranges from locals who have made this their meeting place to hotel guests and casual visitors.

The wine list here is exceptional. Deborah planned this before the menu and she decided from the outset that she would have a wide range of local wines complemented by others from around the world. There are 28 Long Island wines from 16 wineries on the current list, with 27 of these available by the glass for $6 to $14. The international wines represent nine diverse countries with some very interesting and unusual selections, most also available by the glass.

We started our meal with a selection of three appetizers. House ravioli stuffed with crayfish in a saffron Champagne sauce was very delicate in texture and taste and tuna tartare, from the bistro menu, married the freshest of citrus-marinated fish with Asian herbs to produce a light flavorful dish. The Vietnamese-style mussels were the piece de resistance, consisting of plump mussels in a broth redolent of coconut and lemongrass with Malaysian spices that gave a zing which in no way took away from the delicacy of the mussels. We could not remember having eaten mussels anywhere that could beat these. The broth not only demanded to be dunked with some of the wonderful bread from Aldo's but to be drunk by the spoonful. We were told that some diners take home the excess broth in a "doggie bowl!" The menu states that this dish is back "By Popular Demand." Full marks to the power of Vox Populi! This dish should never come off the menu.

For our main courses, we sampled the Long Island duck served in an orange-infused coconut sauce, again with just a hint of Indonesian spice, and a fillet of fresh Chilean sea bass, which had been poached in a miso-sesame broth. Both of these dishes confirmed what we had already decided, that Deborah is a culinary artist of the highest standard.

Dessert samples of a dark Belgian chocolate mousse and a very interesting bread pudding paired with excellent coffee brought a memorable dining experience to a close.

La Cuvee at The Greenporter has added yet another reason why people are making Greenport a gourmet dining destination. Experience the very special delights of this very friendly establishment where only the best is good enough to meet Deborah's high standards and where, like in the show Cheers, after your first visit, everyone will know your name.

—Roy Bradbrook

Bistro menu items range from $6 to $24; appetizers from $6 to $14; Main courses from $21 to $26; Desserts from $6 to $10. La Cuvee is open 7 days a week, until 11 p.m. Monday-Wednesday and until 1 a.m. Thursday-Sunday.

ing on peripheral items, it stops being about the wine.

During the 1990s, Napa experienced an influx of newly-minted millionaires who were attracted to its proximity to the urban Bay Area and who wanted, in some cases, to become winemakers themselves. Macmansions were built and enviros fought to develop vineyards on steep slopes — some claimed the stressed vines produced less though more desirable fruit — and the way was paved for the tourist-driven economy. Cult Cabernets, which they referred to as "rocket juice," reached $500 a bottle and undevelopable acres went for $200,000 and up as land available to plant grapes ran out.

Locals, established vineyards, and serious wine producers in Napa have tried to resist the unwelcome change, which has proceeded apace despite the global wine glut I keep hearing rumors about. Today, many of Napa's acres are owned by the newly moneyed who never met a mountain they couldn't move.

The vineyards that now dot our landscape here on eastern Long Island are owned by a small, dedicated group of pioneers. Not only serious about making great wine, they have held back the building of a sea of houses that might have replaced the potato as our main crop. But if we stop paying attention, even briefly, all can be lost. I truly hope we will look back on these as halcyon years, when measures were adopted to preserve those things that matter so much to us all. Cheers.

Sally Hansen wants you to wash away your cares with their Maximum Growth Nourishing Nail Color Dreamy Pearls Collection. The new color collection, inspired by a fascinating array of aquatic pastels, will enliven and invigorate a sea-mystical magnificence of glamour...Priced at $3.95, give yourself a new look for the upcoming summer season. Available at all your local and chain drug stores in July. Sally Hansen products are available at most drug and cosmetic counters. Stay tuned...

East Hamptons White's Pharmacy on Main Street in East Hampton has some new arrivals...Look for the complete line Frederic Fekkai & Co. famous hair products and brushes. This is one of my favorite hair products, and I'm so glad to see it can be purchased here. Also, I found something short of a miracle and new at Whites Pharmacy and Sag Harbor Pharmacy on Main Street in Sag Harbor. WOW! White teeth indeed...A new product that has hit the Hamptons is...BlanX toothpaste and tooth whitener that actually whitens your teeth without bleach or enamel abrasion, improves gum tissue, helps prevent cavities, the list goes on and on. The secret ingredient? Iceland moss extract. It inhibits the adhesion of bacterial residues on stains and other environmental pollutants. You must try this product and see for yourself as I did. A 4.3 ounce push button canister retails for $17 and lasts three months. It's worth every penny. Go for it!

If you're wandering around Montauk this week, check out Strawberry Fields Flowers and Gifts on Montauk Highway for a beautiful selection of fresh flowers, flowering plants, fresh and dried floral arrangements and gifts for the special people in your life.

Time to run, my girlfriend Joanna will be pulling into the train station in Bridgehampton from Howard Beach (my old neighborhood) in an hour. She can't wait to visit the Hamptons and to do some serious shopping!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Spring Shopping!

Q. I am looking for an experienced pet/house sitter in the Hamptons that will take care of my cats with love and affection. Is there such a thing? - R.G. Sag Harbor

A. I know of a kind, mature writer/animal lover that is experienced and well referenced for your pet, plants and home needs. Kristina of Loving Pet Care can be reached at 329-0130 or email: doglove777@juno.com.

When asked how her boutique and benefit events got started, Mrs. Hurley held Little Lucy, a Poodle/Bichon close. "Before I found Little Lucy at ARF I had Sweetpea. I adopted Sweetpea when she was twelve and she went on to live another twelve years," Pat said. "After I had Sweetpea a year she had to have all her teeth removed and she became blind. She seemed happy so I did everything to keep her alive. When she died I began to walk dogs at ARF and that's when I met Little Lucy. I felt blessed and I wanted to help abused and less fortunate dogs. SPCA is a volunteer association made of up many retired officers. They will rescue animals from situations that others may fear to become involved in and they'll find the animals good homes. I've held benefits for ARF too. These events help get the word out."

Pat Hurley also hosts, scripts and co-produces an Animal Feature monthly show with producer, David Nadal for WVVH on Hamptons TV Channel 78. Among these monthly presentations were: a Special Basset

Rescue show; People Who Take Their Dogs To Work With Them; and an Animal Grief Show.

Incidentally, movie star, Little Lucy will be making her debut wearing a diamond tiara and pearls in her role as Elizabeth Taylor's dog in "Scene Stealers" at a private screening party at Guild Hall this weekend.

GARBO TALKS

When Garbo spoke, the world trembled. The Swedish-born star of silent films was so revered, panic set in when she agreed to do a talkie.

Would she break the spell her voiceless emoting had cast? No. On the contrary, her foreign accented, deep (about three octaves lower than her co-stars' voices) added more suave, sultry sex to the languorous image. Long, long after she left the limelight, the sheer mystery of her lonely life in Manhattan created a new legend and the curiosity spread a wider aura. Fans continued to multiply. This is the subject of Garbo Talks – an homage to the actress who wanted to be alone.

This Saturday, April 26, at 2 p.m., Southampton College will present Dan's Papers' Movies Made Here Film Festival screening of Garbo Talks. It's a warm and witty Valentine to Greta Garbo made with love and affection, by a gang of East End artists led by Sidney Lumet, the world class director and East Hampton squire. He has rounded-up scores of the rich-with-talent and famous to put their signatures on the tribute and they had a good time doing it. Besides, the leading performers, you'll be spotting local celebrities – a lot of them. I'll let you find them.

Garbo Talks traces a young man's attempts to find Garbo and convince her to meet his mother, the ultimate Garbo fan. His mother is portrayed by Anne Bancroft. She's the person the word "feisty" was made for. She's an ardent activist for every good cause. Her son, however, is a bit of a nebbish, unhappy in his accounting job and not quite thrilled and delighted in his marriage. As played by Ron Silver, you know he'll do the right thing. He's always there to bail his mom out of jail and visit her and have her to dinner. When she finds his wife spent three hours on the meal, she said, "She should have read War and Peace." His father, Steven Hill, long ago divorced Anne and she's happy protesting things like "marriage" and her fascination with Garbo. When we first see mom she's in bed sobbing as she watches TV's screening of a Garbo film. Garbo is dying. Anne does not yet know she, herself, is dying of a brain tumor. Ron is the first to know.

When he tells her, her big regret is the news of cobalt treatments – she just had her hair dyed! But, with only four months to live, she must have one wish fulfilled. She must meet Garbo.

This begins Ron's odyssey. Search, research and search for Garbo. Source to source. Person to person: Howard Da Silva, Dorothy Loudon, Hermione Gingold and more. Will he have to follow Garbo to Spain, France, Antigua or Fire Island? Gum-shoeing is time and money consuming. It even costs him his marriage. He persists. He does go to Fire Island, guided by Harvey Fierstein. But time is running out. Does he succeed? Yes! Then he's without his mom. It's ok, the boy has grown up. The experiences of his quest has taught him a lot of what his mother knew all the time.

There will be tears as the lights come up but also some talk and very fresh refreshments. I am Guy de Fraumeni. I'll be there, with Sarah Halsey to share a tear, a smile and a surprise or two. It happens in the Chancellor's building. The password is: "Are you from Oslo?"

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals.

Entertainment In The Hamptons

Bay Street Theatre Hosts Readings Of Two New Plays

Bay Street Theatre continues its tradition of giving life to new plays with staged readings of two new works in April. Essays/4 Voices, by Roger Rosenblatt, will be read on Saturday, April 26 at 7:00 p.m., and will feature the talents of Alan Alda, Katie Finneran, Maria Tucci and Matt McGrath. On Sunday April 27, at 11:00 a.m., Aviators, by Ruth Wolff will take the stage, read by Julie Bonde, Simon Jones and Mercedes Ruehl. About Essays/4 Voices, Roger Rosenblatt writes, "Here, in a night of theater, are essays presented as monologues, dialogues and skits. Most of them are funny, some are serious, all are the product of a very odd mind. I've never seen anything like this tried before, and at the end of the evening we all may know why." This witty, wise play is a collection of ideas, observations and provocations, with titles such as, "Things One Would Like to See in the Movies," "The Men's Room Wall: A Fantasy," "How to Live in the World," "Cliff's Other Notes," and "Essays for Lovers." The expert crafting of words and clarity of thought is sometimes poignant and profound and often hilarious.

Aviators, by Ruth Wolff, is the story of a couple navigating through life's highs and lows, in which challenges to their identities, personal realities and relationships question the truth of what is real, permanent and meaningful. Jan and Harry Hawkesworth are an academic couple of high spirits and high imagination who teach at a college at the edge of the sea. Married for over 20 years, their lives seem relatively steady until events deep in their past explode in the present and the mysterious appearance of a young woman jolts them out of their cocooned, hermetically-sealed lives.

The Bay Street Theatre Play Reading Series, comprised of one weekend each in the spring and fall, offers established and emerging playwrights an opportunity to hear their new work in front of an audience. It is also a forum to determine a new play's readiness and a classic play's suitability for possible production at the theater.

Both readings will take place at the theater, located at the corner of Bay and Main Streets in Sag Harbor. Tickets for the general admission shows are $10.00 to the public (free to members of Bay Street Theatre) and may be ordered by calling the Box Office at 631-725-9500. To become a member, call Julie Fitzgerald at 631-725-0818.

"Meet The Writers" Book Fair

There still will be the big tents, the art exhibit and over 90 authors meeting and signing their books for the public. But there's one big difference: Now, for the first time in 26 years, the annual "Meet the Writers" Book Fair that benefits Southampton College will finally be held on campus.

The popular Book Fair that's known as the unofficial kickoff to the Hamptons summer season will now enjoy the ample grounds of the College's Chancellors Hall Lawn for the first time. Author Tom Wolfe will be the 15th recipient of the John Steinbeck Award at the Book Fair, which takes place on Friday, May 2 from 4 to 7:30 p.m.

Over 90 local writers – from literary newcomers to bestsellers including Wolfe, Nelson DeMille, James Brady, Steven Gaines, Roger Rosenblatt and Dava Sobel – will meet the public and autograph their works at the rain-or-shine event. It is sponsored by the John Steinbeck Project at Southampton College and benefits the college's Library and Writing program. An art exhibit will also be on view in the Avram Gallery.

Admission to the event is $20 in advance/$25 at the door. For tickets and further information, call (631) 287-8347.

Calling All Musicians

Bay Street Theatre will hold auditions for musicians for its Summer Mainstage production of The Boy Friend on May 2, from 4 p.m. – 6 p.m. The auditions will be held at the theater, located at the corner of Bay and Main Streets in Sag Harbor. Both union and non-union musicians are welcome, and should bring a resume and be prepared to play from the overture of the show, as well as sight read other pieces. The Boy Friend, a musical by Sandy Wilson, will run at the theater from August 5 – 31.

Positions for which we will be auditioning include: Drummer who can also handle light percussion;

Bass player (stand-up, not electric); Guitarist who is also proficient at banjo; Woodwind: flute, clarinet, soprano sax, tenor sax; Violin, with experience as a soloist, not just ensemble

Any questions may be directed to the theatre at 631-725-0818.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

In a bizarrely inane way, the comedy of Adam Sandler has created a very large niche in the convulsively convoluted business of kid-like, pandering movies that lower the term low-brow far below that of Cro-Magnon man.

The performers, writers and directors of the Neolithic, far-out humor that introduced semen to the Clairol shampoo formula, laughably generated millions but turned the evolutionary process back a million years. Of late, a few have been trying to walk in an upright position. Still youthful, Mr. Sander is one of them, however wobbly. His popularity has allowed him to get out of the stroller and walk into studio executive offices and produce his own films. His Punch-Drunk Love was quite thoughtfully art-house and critically well received. Emboldened, Sandler reached out and plucked Jack Nicholson out from the dignity of his art-house indie, About Schmidt, to team up in a no-holds-barred, broad comedy of manners. The manners are all bad and mad as hell in the rage ravaged Anger Management.

Jack (The Joker) Nicholson is not exactly typecast

Anger Management

as the doctor chosen to manage the anger of Sandler's soft-spoken ad exec who can't stand conflict. Not so with Jack. You may remember the real Jack "the Cool" was arrested for trying to put right a traffic disagreement by wrapping a golf club around the other car's hood ornament or the driver's head. Sandler's meek n' mousey ad man (he's so wimpy, he can't take girlfriend Marisa Tomei's public kissing) gets inexplicably involved in an airline fracas, accused of assaulting a flight attendant, and in court, ordered by tough judge Lynne Thigpen to attitude adjustment therapy, administered by the boor who instigated the airplane incident - Jack the Quack-sounding Doc. In between the beret and beard Jack wears, his mouth spouts stuff about T.A.S., Toxic Anger Syndrome: "Temper is the one thing you can't get rid of by losing it" and "Sarcasm is anger's ugly cousin." The obnoxious doctor epitomizes all of it and is just about as wacky as his patients: John Turturro is a war lover and gets some of the script's best lines. He shares the group's angst with Luis Gusman. They're all persecuted.

New York City is a natural location for bile-boiling anger. It comes with the territory. A long list of NYC ire-ridden, personality cameos included, Woody Harrelson, John C. Reilly, John McEnroe and Rudi Giuliani. Heather Graham's beauty is as self-inflicted as her weird choice of lingerie, giving Sandler one of the best grown-up deliveries, contrasting wildly with Nicholson's rampant indulgence. It is after all, their movie. Another funny odd couple though no longer that odd. Check with Bobby De Niro and Billy Crystal,

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

If you really like Robert Duvall, as I do, this film which he wrote, directed and stars in is worth seeing. Otherwise, you should be guided by the consensus of other critics, which is that this movie is not very good.

I liked it not only because Robert Duvall is the principal actor (John) but also because it is a mood piece. Were it made with fewer script holes, it might have been designated as a film noir. It also has the feeling of a foreign film, which I love when done well, and not simply because much of it takes place in Argentina.

The principal female actor is Manuela (Luciana

Assassination Tango (+)

Pedraza) who is Duvall's girlfriend in real life. She speaks English in the film, and the two of them do a marvelous tango together. The tango is the national dance of Argentina, and when it is done well, it is also the sexiest dance imaginable.

John is a hit man living in Brooklyn with his girlfriend Maggie (Kathy Baker) and her adolescent daughter Jenny (Katherine Mischeaux Miller). He is sent to Buenos Aires, Argentina, to assassinate a retired Argentine general who was responsible for torturing and killing Argentines when the military dictatorship ruled the country. How that assassination occurs with the assistance of Miguel (Ruben Blades) makes up the balance of the movie.

There are interesting scenes of Buenos Aires and terrific repartee among John and a number of Argentines. I wish our directors and producers would do more little movies like this one even if they are not always complete successes.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

CONTENT EQUALS FORM:

MATHEW BARNEY AT THE GUGGENHEIM

No matter how one describes it, whether it's a subject that mirrors its style (in the visual arts) or a message that equals structure (in film), the more intellectually provocative the endeavor seems. Content and form are one. Or what you say becomes how you say it.

While such a concept is not new, critical analysis is not often based on this particular approach. Even so, the idea was evident in two recent New York presentations.

One creative work was the film by Iranian director, Abbas Kiarostami, called Ten. It's a fascinating, but slow moving movie, which records conversations between a taxi driver and her passengers. The fact that the driver is a divorcee and the film is really about women's issues in Iran make it all the more intriguing.

The most pertinent point, however, is the fact that we only hear the cabbie talk to her passengers for much of the movie. We do not see her interact with her own son, for example, an eight-year-old passenger who is obviously alienated from his mother. As the woman comes to a greater understanding of her problems, we see shots of her intercut with her child and other people who are important. Thus, she is getting closer, both literally and figuratively. Yet issues are not resolved; mutual alienation continues between parent and child. We can all certainly relate to that.

We can't say the same for Mathew Barney's films, photographs, drawings and sculptures currently at the Guggenheim Museum. His Cremaster series (Cremaster 2 was shown in the "Artists Make Movies" presentation at the 2001 Hampton International Film Festival) is confusing to many viewers. Barney's art continues to be questioned as well.

No matter, Barney's most potent credo is content equals form, confusing or not. It's what makes him a complex, original and important artist in this critic's view.

Barney's exhibit at the Guggenheim includes sculptures from his films: for example, the circular patterned beehive motif found in Cremaster 2 (Bessie and Frank Gilmore's cabinet), a non-linear version of Norman Mailer's Gary Gilmore story, The Executioner's Song. The Guggenheim's configuration is a perfect space for housing these objects of stylistic and thematic circularity.

While Cremaster 3 tells the story of the Chrysler Building's construction, a scene takes place in the Guggenheim, thus emphasizing the dialectics between vertical and circular shapes. The latter structure relates to the narrative as well when a character (the Apprentice) must navigate various barriers placed on the Museum's levels. The Guggenheim has been given a new life with Barney's film.

HONORING THE ARTIST: GORDON MATHESON

"It seems like I've always been involved with the 'biggest this' or 'the biggest that,'" Gordon Matheson laughs explaining his previous life as a textile stylist and designer. He was, of course, talking about his position at well-known fabric companies: Burlington Industries (the free world's largest worsted mill) and J.P. Stevens (the world's largest woolen mill). (Mr. Matheson was also at Hartmarx, but apparently it doesn't hold any world record.)

Mr. Matheson's association with mills, generally, and textiles, particularly, goes back to his geographical roots where growing up in North and South Carolina put him at the center of mill country. His father was professionally involved with textiles as well. Yet, Mr. Matheson's academic degree was in textile engineering at North Carolina State, not art, where he studied mill management. It wasn't until he went to work for New York's J. P. Stevens that he received on-the-job training in fabric design.

It also helped that Mr. Matheson lived in Manhattan where he was exposed to a lot of museums. "I was happy in New York even if it was a big city and I had grown up in the South. I liked all the beautiful women, too. I married one," he says laughing again. "And I especially liked the museums where I could study composition and color."

It was in the early days of his New York sojourn that Mr. Matheson and his brother discovered the East End. "My brother and I loved to take road trips so one day we got out a map and looked for a beach. It was Montauk, and after that first trip we were hooked. My brother has lived a lot of other places, but he came back to live in East Hampton."

Mr. Matheson's cover work reflects his continuing interest in nature, a penchant that he has had since a young boy. "My family and friends tease me, saying that I will always take the 'long cut' rather than the 'short cut' if I'm going anyplace so I can experience the landscape," he recalls.

The cover, "Clamdivers at Northwest Harbor," is a case in point featuring the long cut approach, figuratively-speaking that is. As Mr. Matheson explains, "I went out to Barcelona Neck in the winter to sketch in 20 degree temperatures. I liked the work so much that I took the sketch and made a painting with a summer setting."

Mr. Matheson is also pleased with this cover piece, perhaps because it allows him to use the tenets of Luminism, an art movement connected with the Hudson River Valley School. While he has done landscapes where darker colors prevail, featuring plowed fields after the rain, Mr. Matheson is committed to the Luminous method. And to the rural landscape which reminds him of his roots.

Looking for some interesting entertainment? How about a little karaoke? I know it can be pretty scary sometimes, but you have to admit mostly it's a blast. Matt Coss of East End Karaoke can turn a boring night into a fun party. Check him out as he DJ's and lets us sing in Montauk at West Cove Bar and Grill on Friday's and the Shebeen on Thursday's. Both nights start around 10 p.m. East End Karaoke can also be hired for private functions. They supply their own equipment. You can even have a Frank Sinatra tribute performed by Matt himself. I can't think of anything better to do with friends than to serenade them. Make that trip to Montauk or hire East End Karaoke for your next bash. It will be well worth it. Call (631) 668-4944 or go to eastendkaraoke.com

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

On a recent tour of the Canadian Eastern Townships, along with about fifty colleagues, I had the pleasure of experiencing the bucolic countryside southeast of Montreal where this year's annual International Association of Culinary Professionals (IACP) conference took place.

Our visit began at Cabane du-Pic Bois (Woodpecker's shack) where we tasted three choice grades of maple syrup, unusually delicious maple vinegar and dipped wooden spoons into hot maple syrup drizzled into a trough of fresh fallen snow. The timing was perfect, it had snowed the day before and the chilly Canadian air obliged. We next visited Brome Lake Ducks, Ltd. Canada's largest duck farm in Knowlton. Le canard de Pekin originated in China as have our own Long Island ducks when the company's founder brought them from New York in 1912. At nearby Auberge Quilliams, an elegant all-inclusive Inn, in Ville Lac Brome (Quebec) we enjoyed a festive lunch that began with a lovely salad of pea and corn shoots poised over fluffy spinach leaves, a round of Saint-Benoit Abbey Le Moine cheese dressed with cider vinegar dressing. The dish du jour, duck of course, meaty and tender was followed by dessert, a creamy maple fondant, sliced chocolate terrine and fieldberry sherbet.

We next visited L'Orpailleur the largest wine producer in the Eastern Township. An informative video proved to the skeptical among us how vines could survive the cold Canadian climate. And indeed they do to produce several varieties of fine wines as well as Artisanal cheeses. The finale was a visit to Domain Pinnacle in Frelighsburg, a family owned orchard and cidery that produces cidre de glace or ice cider from late harvested apples. A true taste experience — as was our excellent journey discovering the regional specialties of Quebec's Eastern Townships.

ROASTED BROME LAKE DUCK WITH APPLES AND GINGER

The tender and tasty ginger and maple scented duck from Brome Lake was served to us at Auberge Quilliams in Ville Lac Brome, (Quebec) Canada
Serves 2-3

1 4 1/2-5 pound fresh meaty duck
Salt
1 large onion, peeled and trimmed

1- 2 Macintosh apples, cored and trimmed
1/4 - 1/3 cup freshly grated ginger
1/3 cup maple syrup
1 tablespoon each salt and pepper
3 - 3 1/2 cups water
2 tablespoons cornstarch

Preheat oven to 325 degrees

1. Remove giblets from cavity of the duck. Cut off wing tips at the second joint. Trim excess fat from neck and cavity, rinse well and pat dry with paper towels. With a long-tined fork take long shallow running stitches through the surface of the duck skin being careful not to pierce the meat. Season with a light sprinkling of salt.

2. Cut onions and apples in large chunks and put into a mixing bowl. Add the ginger, maple syrup, salt and pepper and toss to mix. Stuff the duck with the mixture and skewer the opening closed. Place duck, breast side up, on a rack in a roasting pan and pour in about 2 cups water. Roast in preheated oven for 45 minutes. Turn breast side down and roast for 45 minutes longer. Pour off water and fat from pan each time the duck is turned and discard. Most of the fat should be rendered out at this point. Put 1 to 1-1/2 cups fresh water in the pan and roast for 45-50 minutes longer. Transfer duck to a carving board, remove stuffing and puree to add to the sauce if desired.

3. Meanwhile skim the duck broth and pour into a saucepan. Place over medium heat and bring to a brisk simmer. Dissolve the cornstarch in 1/4-cup cold water and slowly add to the duck broth, stirring well to prevent lumps. Bring to the boil, stirring constantly, until slightly thickened. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

4. Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Return duck to oven and roast breast side up for 25-30 minutes longer to finish cooking and crisp the skin. Cut the duck into quarters and serve the sauce from a sauceboat.

QUILLIAMS INN MAPLE FONDANT

This mousse-like mixture accompanied a chocolate terrine and fieldberry sherbet at our Quilliams Inn lunch.
Serves 6-8

1/4 cup cold water
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup maple syrup
2 cups heavy cream
1 teaspoon maple essence

1. Pour water into a glass measure and sprinkle over gelatin. Stir gelatin to soften.

2. In a small saucepan warm the maple syrup and add the gelatin. Stir to dissolve the gelatin. Remove from heat and let cool.

3. Beat the cream until soft peaks form. Continue beating the cream slowly adding the maple syrup mixture. Beat until stiff peaks form. Divide equally into dessert glasses and chill for at least 2 hours or longer. Serve with droplets of maple essence if available.

Dining In The Hamptons

Side Dish By Aji Jones

On Friday May 2 at 7:30 p.m. Oasis in Sag Harbor will feature a five-course wine dinner prix fixe. The wines of The Ceretto Winery, located in Piedmont, Italy, will be selected to pair with each course. The meal served for $75 per person plus tax and gratuity. Menu items will include: Grilled calamari stuffed with shrimp, scallops and red snapper in a spicy limoncello vinaigrette; roasted fennel, endive and radicchio salad; roast rack of lamb with Parmesan reggiano cheese and parsley crust and for dessert, chocolate zabaglione on almond biscotti torta with espresso and sambuca cream.

Turtle Crossing is back! The popular East Hampton Tex-Mex restaurant will open for the season on Thursday, May 1. To help kick off the reopening, they'll host a lively party on Friday, May 2 (open to the public) at their bar at 5 p.m. Complimentary hors d'oeuvres will be served and everyone's first drink (beer, house wine or margarita) will be on the house. There will be live musical entertainment from "Mama Lee & Friends" beginning at 5:30 p.m. Turtle Crossing will serve dinner Thursday through Monday and lunch on Saturday and Sunday.

Babette's, located in the heart of East Hampton village, has added new items to their breakfast and lunch menus. Eggs royale (two poached eggs on taragon chicken and spinach plumage served with potato galette) will now be available for breakfast. And for lunch, two new wraps will be offered. Houston con Fusion is a BBQ chicken wrap with hummus, spinach and jicama and the Mediterranean vegetable wrap is artichokes, cucumber, spinach, hummus and red onion with feta cheese.

Mark your calendar for Friday, May 2, for The Maidstone Arms in East Hampton and Amagansett Wines & Spirits "Tuscany Wine Dinner". Both will be hosting a four course dinner, created by The Maidstone Arms chef Paul Del Favero and will be paired with five fine Italian wines selected by Amagansett Wine & Spirits. Price per person, including wine is $85, plus tax and gratuity. Reservations are suggested. Call 324-5494 for the extensive menu.

On May 4 at six p.m., Tierra Mar in Westhampton will host the Great Chefs Gala 2003. Presented by the Suffolk County Community College Culinary Arts Program and the SCC foundation, this event will honor food and wine professionals who have demonstrated excellence in their field. A 50/50 raffle and silent auction will be held, drinks and hors d'oeuvres will be served, and there will be a live band and casino style gambling for prizes. All funds raised will go to the improvement of the S.C.C.C. Culinary Arts Program. Individual ticket reservations are $75, however contribution packages are available for those who would like to make a larger donation. Call 631- 548-2628 for info.

Taste of the Nation will take place this Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. at Rubi Red. Brought to you by American Express, Jenn Air, Evian and Sysco, and organized by Paula Schiff, the gala will offer food and drink from local participants Almond, Bamboo, Ciao Bella, Hampton Chocolate, Hampton Coffee Company, Hampton Clambake, Harvest, North by Northeast, Old Stone Market, The Laundry, Michael Mosolino Catering, Barefoot Contessa, Estia, Turtle Crossing, Oasis, Rubi Red, Saracen, Michael's at Maidstone, Schmidts of East Hampton, World Pie, Breadzilla and Dairyland. All funds raised will go to Island Harvest and Long Island Cares. If purchased in advance tickets are $40, purchased the day of the event $50. Call 516-446-8423.

Winemaker Kip Bedell of Bedell Cellars and Corey Creek Vineyards will be presenting his wines along side the cuisine of the Antares Café, Greenport, NY at the James Beard House on Friday, May 16. The featured wines include: Bedell's Raspberry Wine, 2001 Bedell Cellars Main Road White, 2001 Corey Creek Rosé, 2000 Corey Creek Reserve Chardonnay, 2000 Bedell Viognier, 1999 Bedell Cupola, 1999 Bedell Cellars Cabernet Sauvignon and 2000 Bedell Late Harvest Riesling. For reservations call 212-627-2308.

The Ross School in East Hampton will host a Food and Wine Celebration to benefit the national organization, Woman Chefs and Restaurateurs. Taking place on May 3 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Ross School's Center for Well-Being, the event will showcase top woman chefs from across the country. There will be a tasting coupled with regional wines, as well as live jazz provided by Hal Mckusick and his band. The price for tickets is $100. Call 631-907-5555 for reservations.

After relocating to the Hamptons two and half years ago from Brooklyn, I realized that the only thing that I truly do miss (other than my friends and the view of the Brooklyn Bridge), is the Italian restaurants. Every block has at least two pizzerias as well as one or two formal Italian restaurants that are always packed. Since moving, my quest for anything similar has resulted in disappointment, until now – the grand opening of Boccacini, “a neighborhood brick oven pizzeria and pastaria.” Brooklyn has finally come to the Hamptons.

Owners Vinny Senisi, Frankie Genovas, and Carl Clausen explained to me that all of the recipes were handed down from Italian relatives who came to this country from Bari, a city in Southern Italy on the Adriatic coast and made their homes in Brooklyn. Vinny's family owned a restaurant on Avenue U where his grandfather, Nunzio, taught him how to bake, while Frankie's family moved to Long Island where they now own three successful restaurants. They are Francesco's in Babylon and Bella Napoli and Bellagio's in Farmingdale. All three gentlemen met while fishing here in the Hamptons, and decided to utilize their talents in a collaborative effort to create one of the best neighborhood pizzerias and Italian restaurants.

Upon entering Boccacini, I was immediately drawn to the colorful murals depicting streets or piazza similar to the ones I strolled down in Florence. Clay doorways are covered with overgrown ivy and a lamppost tangled in vines illuminates the dining room. The faux marble walls have wine cork as its trim and the floor is a gorgeous ceramic tile. Beautiful artwork all created by the very talented and local artist Alexandra Zlotnik.

Our host and the manager of Boccacini, Carl Clausen escorted us to our table and introduced us to the lovely and informative waitress, Tara Tully, who uncorked our Merlot, (it is b.y.o.b. until they receive their liquor license) and read us the specials. I noticed that the dining room was filled with diners of all ages, there was a family with small children behind our table, several young couples, and an older Italian couple all very preoccupied with their meals. And by glancing at the extensive menu, I realized that they offer every imaginable type of pasta dish for an average price of $10. They also have hot and cold antipastos ranging from $4- $13, several Italian entrees with fish, poultry, and veal starting at $15, as well as their signature brick oven pizzas and pizzettes starting at $6. This is definitely not just a pizzeria.

Each table begins with a basket of warmed bread and a dish of olive oil. Then it is on to the appetizers. We were served fresh mozzarella with oven-roasted red peppers, sesame crusted, rare Yellowfin tuna carpaccio and my favorite, the gameri alla panna or lightly battered butterflied jumbo shrimp topped with mozzarella and prosciutto in a light cream sauce. All are absolutely delicious. Then it was on to the house specialty, we ordered two Boccacini brick oven pizzettes that are baked in ovens exceeding 900 degrees. The Vegetariana has pesto crust, roasted vegetables, sun-dried tomatoes, and ricotta and Romano cheeses. And for those spicy types, the Salsiccia, which is topped with, roasted sausage, tomatoes, mozzarella and hot cherry peppers. I will definitely be back for the pizza.

After a short reprieve, Tara then brought us our entrees accompanied by two sides of pasta covered with one of the tastiest marinara sauces I have ever eaten.

The veal Valentino is tender stuffed veal scaloppini, topped with porcini mushrooms in a sherry and light cream sauce. And the breast of chicken scarparella is sautéed with mushrooms, roasted peppers, fresh rosemary, sausage, prosciutto and onions. This is the meal that I will order on my next visit.

But, the piece de resistance of this evening, was the phenomenal desserts. Not only was the presentation a work of art, but the creamy chocolate cheesecake made with crème de cocoa, the canoli with chocolate chips, the fluffy tiramisu and the hazelnut and espresso gelato all brought me back to the streets of Bay Ridge and Carroll Gardens. Thank God for Grandpa Nunzio's recipes.

So come on down to Boccacini and experience an authentic Italian neighborhood pizzeria and pastaria in the heart of Hampton Bays in the new King Kullen shopping center. They will make you feel like one of the family. Tutto Bene!

How To Make A Grand Entrance

Three things are a must when creating an intimate entry, a clear path, a sense of enclosure and attractive plantings. The front entry is the most frequently traveled space in a garden, where a lasting first impression is formed long before the doorbell has rung. Sometimes so much is happening on the way in, that one simply gets lost. A jumble of paths, and a jungle of plants, get a few snags by wayward rose thorns, or drenched by wet overhanging foliage. Chance are, you've slid on slippery bricks or rocks, tromped through mud, or tripped on uneven paving when visiting someone. Of course, I think of the saddest entries of all are the ones with a few lonely evergreens growing out of 'sorely needing freshening' mulch.

Start by dressing up your front door. Give it a fresh coat of paint and perhaps paint the surrounding trim in a contrasting color. Of course the architecture of your home will determine the scale and grandeur of the entry area but the addition of a few vines or container plants can enhance even the most modern entry. Some annual pots are a great opportunity for seasonal displays of color that can be changed and refreshed for renewed interest with just a little effort.

When planning your paths, remember a curved one adds much more visual interest than a straight one. If at all possible, instead of aiming the path straight for the front door, let it wind its way through the entry garden more gradually, so that your guests travel slowly, enjoying glimpses of beautiful plants and breathing in enticing fragrances like scented geraniums smelling like lemons and citrus. Small thyme plants planted in between walkways are begging to be crushed by the foot – releasing a sweet smell into the air.

If you want to forgo the blooms, a gold, silver and variegated leaves will make your entry colorful without a single flower in bloom. Remember when doing your foundations, do the foundations and not the windows! A terrible mistake is planting Rhododendrons or Privet Hedges smack under a window. They get huge after a few years and sometimes, unless professional pruning is done, they can become a ragged mess.

If you are lucky enough to have an enclosed porch or overhang, you can get some of those natural husk type baskets to hang from white chains. In the spring, a flowing annual such as a trailing petunia or some other vine will be beautiful. Then come fall, the spent plant can be removed to make way for some fall foliage, such as multicolored leaves arranged vine like. In the winter, I trim my White Pine tree and put all the branches in the hanging baskets with a red ribbon.. Water now and then to keep fresh and I have a winter display to carry all the way through till the spring again.

Keeping the potted annuals well pruned will keep them blooming prolifically throughout the early spring and warm summer months. Remove spent blossoms and sweep up fallen ones. With a little effort once a week or so, your front entrance will be the most welcoming one on the block.

Rhododendrons: Love Them And They Love You Back

"Look at that rhododendron," said a client of mine sorrowfully to me one day. "It was simply gorgeous when I transplanted it. Now it's dying and I don't know why?" His hand swept expressively past his other healthy flowering plants and shrubs to the rhododendron. The leaves were yellowing and wilting. A layer of brown peat neatly ringed its base.

I pushed the peat moss back. Digging deep into the soil, my hands came up with scoop after scoop of damp, clay loam, and excellent soil for many kinds of plants. Pointing to the soil, I said, "Would you try to keep your dog alive on lettuce or beans?"

"Why, no!" he exclaimed in puzzlement. "What does that have to do with the rhododendron?" "The simplest way to explain," I went on, "is to say that rhododendrons are as different in their dietary needs as dogs are from rabbits. You've got it planted in the wrong type of soil. You'll have to give it what it needs."

Following the instructions of a self-appointed organic horticulture expert, my client had acidified

the soil with a recommended chemical. Then he covered it with a layer of peat moss. For a time the plant seemed to do well; then it became steadily more and more anemic in appearance. For one thing the so-called organic horticulture expert had him plant it too deep. Rhododendrons are very shallow rooted. They are surface-feeders and will not tolerate deep plunging of the roots. Nor will they tolerate wet feet.

I returned with a bushel or so of woods loam. Lifting out the plant, I dug a respectable hole and filled nearly level with the right soil. The rhododendron was replanted in it. Rotted hardwood sawdust was spread beneath it, and a layer of peat moss was added. By fall, several months later, it had responded eagerly to the simple treatment.

At Spring Meadow Organic Research Farms, we've been growing evergreen ornamentals, both broadleaf and needled, for quite a few years. They arrive in the form of rooted cuttings and as liners, a term popularly used among nurserymen to indicate seedling stock or rooted cuttings which have been established in outdoor beds for one or more years for further development.

Rhododendrons and the low, spreading forms of junipers are especially popular in landscaping. These plants will respond with excellent growth if a few simple requirements are followed. Given proper care, a selection of such liners will give the buyer a value multiplied many times over in a few short years. Their purchase is a good idea for homeowners limited financially in obtaining full landscape-size plants.

Rhododendron liners grow into fine plants in our rows under this simple method: A small hole is dug for each liner, then filled with woods loam and the liner firmly planted in it. If woods loam is not available, a mixture consisting of rotted hardwood sawdust, peat moss or decayed leaves combined with two parts loam will prove suitable. The soil should have a pH of 4.5 to 5.5, fairly acid. Proper soil type is the foundation of a good plant.

Shade is another prime factor often overlooked. Rhododendrons flourish in partial shade, which helps guard against the effects of strong, direct winter sun. Severe searing of leaves occurs from unprotected exposure and drying winds. There must be an ample amount of moisture. Also, see that no lime comes in contact with the plants; they dislike it and will suffer.

No Propane, No Gain

Shopping for a full-size gas grill may seem easy enough: Lift some lids, compare styles, pick a color. But if you want to choose the best (and safest) grill for your money, dig a little deeper. Ask a few questions about the grill's basic features before you buy.

How does a gas grill work? It's really pretty simple. There are burners to create heat. Above them you'll find some type of system to disperse the heat from the burners (inverted v-shaped metal bars, ceramic briquettes, lava rock, etc.). Above these lie the cooking grates. Together, these elements make up the cooking system.

How many burners do I need? Better grills generally have two or more separate burners (not just control knobs). They provide the best heat control. Most lower-priced grills have only one burner which may result in hot and cold spots on the cooking grate. Look for multiple burners made of high-grade stainless steel, they will last longer.

What about BTUs? BTUs (British Thermal Units) measure how much volume of gas a grill can burn, not heat output, so more is not necessarily better. In fact, a grill with fewer BTUs that reaches 550°F is the most efficient grill you can buy. It will reach broiling temperatures but won't waste fuel. So look for a grill with the BTU that matters—Better Tank Utilization.

How is heat distributed? Most grills rely on lava rock or ceramic briquettes to distribute the heat from the burners to the cooking surface.

Drippings from the food tend to pool in these systems causing unwanted flare-ups. Instead, look for a system with inverted v-shaped metal bars (such as the Flavorizer bars pioneered by Weber) to funnel the grease away from the burner flames, greatly reducing flare-ups.

Where does the grease go? Some manufacturers do not include a catch pan, but instead instruct you to hang an empty soup can on a wire to collect grease. Others provide shallow pans that spill easily when removed. Look for a catch pan that is at least 1-inch deep. It should be easy to access from the front of the grill.

Is the plumbing a safe distance from hot surfaces? Make sure any electrical wiring and, most importantly, the gas line plumbing is set a safe distance from hot surfaces. Look for a grill with the gas tank located safely off to the side rather than directly below the grill.

Does your grill come with a tank and a tank scale? If you have to buy the tank separately, it adds to the total price of the grill. Ask before you get a surprise at the checkout counter. And look for a grill with a tank scale—you'll never run out of fuel mid-barbecue.

Who's backing your purchase? Will the manufacturer be around when you need advice next summer or parts 10 years from now? Thorough, easy-to-read instructions should be a given, along with a 24-hour, toll-free, customer service hotline.

What's covered by the warranty? The warranty should include more promises than fine print and caveats. Ask before you end up paying extra for what you thought was covered. And don't compromise on anything less than a 10-year warranty.

Rhododendrons (continued from page 56)

It's true that we grow several of our rhododendrons in full sunshine and that they do well. However, some shade is present, since the plants tend to slightly shade each other in the rows. But we have discovered that those growing in shade specially provided are more vigorous. Shade was simply grown along with the rhododendrons by planting corn or sunflowers. These protected the shrubs during the hot summer months; then, left standing, they offered shade and windbreaks over winter.

Being confirmed believers in the value of mulching, we keep rows deeply covered with straw, shredded leaves and wood chips. These combine the form the most desirable growing medium. The slow decay adds the much needed humus and slow-release nourishment to the surface of the soil, where the shallow roots have access to it. How pleasantly cool and moist the soil beneath remains during hot weather. It halts winter evaporation about the roots. Weeds are kept down and little other attention is required after the plants have established themselves.

The spreading junipers are far easier to grow. They make little demand outside of a place to thrive, even though the soil may be poor. Under favorable conditions, they will grow more vigorously. Juniper liners or potted plants are relatively inexpensive and obtainable from the majority of nursery outlets. Although junipers will tolerate dry soils, they respond best to ample moisture.

Gravel soil, sandy loam, lime soil, almost any soil that will support some kind of plant growth will do for junipers. All will take severe pruning easily, coming back with more compact growth as a result. They are quite tough; often taking abuse that would be the death of other kinds of plants. They like full exposure to the sun and doing well in such a location.

Junipers, as a rule, are quite easy to transplant even if quite large. But it helps to prune them back sharply before moving. Big specimens may look ugly when severely pruned, but in a single season new growth compactly hides all scars, and the transplant establishes itself with little trouble. Any organic mulch is suitable for junipers. They are deeply mulched with straw in our rows and practically forgotten after that.

—Crow Miller

Mother's Day: What Mom Wants

Mother's Day is on its way. Time to find a suitable gift for Mom, one that shows you're thinking of her. After spending a weekend with my cousin's family (a three-year-old and a one-and-a-half-year-old), I've realized that there is no gift that can compensate for all that sleep deprivation, patience, running around playing ball, cooking up mac and cheese, potty training, watching the same Disney movie over and over and over and over, reading bedtime books, and soothing after a middle-of-the-night bad dream. After years and years of work, parents deserve endless thanks and appreciation, and while the real reward is watching your children grow up, mothers appreciate the gesture of a gift of gratitude and the chance to take just one nationally-endorsed day for themselves.

Yoga and spa treatments are a nice way to give your Mom a day to herself, but gifts for the home last forever. While it could just as easily be Dad cooking up dinner these days, kitchen accoutrements are a nice gift for a Martha-Stewart-style Mom. Cuisinart, the old standby, is a reliable gift option with food processors ranging in price from the low 100's to 300 and up. They also make a mini-food processor, which sells for forty dollars, and is and their hand-painted dishes are wonderful for entertaining at a summer house. Mecox Gardens, which prides itself on its home goods that unite the interior and the garden, sells antique furniture as well as glassware, baskets, and terra cotta planters. They have stores in both East Hampton and Southampton, but the latter is the "flagship" store and sits on three acres with a garden.

For those who entertain or just enjoy relaxing at home, C & W Mercantile in Bridgehampton is a good spot for gifts. They sell quality items that make a home more pleasant and beautiful. Their bed linens are imported from France, and they supply a broad assortment of quality soaps and bath products made from natural essences. As one eloquent salesperson put it, they sell everything one needs to set a beautiful table. The store has both casual and formal tablecloths and napkins, along with glasses, stemware, flatware by Scof, napkin rings, place cards, and candles. Their Vera Bradley totes with colorful prints are mother-pleasers, and they also sell lamps, a variety of picture frames (from wooden to silver), print art, and rugs. Their elegant photo albums are a big seller and make a nice gift for mothers.

Art is always a timeless gift (not to mention a good investment), and the East End is full of blooming and established artists with work to sell. Mothers appreciate their own children's work the most, but if you're over the draw-your-Mom-a-picture-for-a-present age, you might consider stopping by one of the galleries for an original piece by more established artists. The Wally Findlay Gallery and Vered Art Gallery, both in East Hampton, carry a variety of works, as does the Sara Nightingale Gallery in Watermill. Edmund Winfield Gallery and the Grenning Gallery in Sag Harbor also show contemporary original art, the latter of which focuses on "Old Masters' techniques." Those are just a few places to start; there are a multitude of art galleries and artists who sell their work independently.

And no matter what you end up giving your Mom this mother's day, just remember what she always told you: "It's the thought that counts."

—Rachel May

good for smaller jobs like making salsa or chopping herbs and vegetables. They have a variety of hand-held mixers, toasters, coffee pots, and any other kitchen appliance one might need. My favorite item is the sorbet, frozen yogurt, and ice cream maker, which sells for about fifty dollars. Good for making desserts for those summertime dinner parties, it's also fun to make ice cream with the kids.

For mothers with the decorating knack, the Hamptons has plenty of shops to satisfy that nesting need. RumRunner, located in East Hampton and Southampton, has beautiful home goods that will surely please your Mom on Mother's Day. They sell furniture that can be custom-ordered to your style, so whether Mom wants a new hutch, dining room table, couch, or bed, they can help you find what she needs and tailor it to her liking and the furniture you already own. They also sell throws, bedding, and various other accents for the home,

All Natural Treatments For Facial Rejuvenation

Forget the five-week wait for the allergy test to come back in order to get a bovine collagen treatment, a dermal filler derived from a cow. Now people want to experience immediate facial rejuvenation with the new human collagen products Cosmoderm and Cosmoplast. These natural products recently received FDA approval for the treatment of facial wrinkles and the restoration of the lip border. Derived from actual human tissue grown in a laboratory under controlled conditions, Cosmoderm and Cosmoplast are the first collagen implants that do not require skin test for allergies prior to use. As a result, patients may now enjoy convenience of same-day, single-visit facial rejuvenation. Another new treatment, the NLite Laser Collagen Replenishment, stimulates the body's own natural collagen and results can last years.

As people get older, the collagen layer begins to thin at a rate of approximately 1% per year causing wrinkles. Also, sun damage, smoking, alcohol consumption, and hormonal changes can lead to premature wrinkles. Dr. Alexander Covey, a Board-Certified Cosmetic Laser Surgeon and Director of East End Laser Care in Southampton, New York, is one of a few doctors in New York who has been using the NLite Laser, the first non-ablative laser to get FDA approval for wrinkle reduction. Dr. Covey says, "Many of my patients are requesting NLite, Cosmoplast, and Cosmoderm treatments because they are a natural and immediate way to replenish their skin's collagen."

Disadvantages:

- Results are not immediate
- Usually works better where the skin is thinner

Cosmoderm and Cosmoplast

The new human engineered collagen implants are proven treatments that soften lines and wrinkles and enhance the natural appearance of the skin. Cosmoderm is used in the treatment of superficial lines whereas CosmoPlast is primarily used in the treatment of more pronounced wrinkles.

Advantages:

- The ingredients are natural and of human origin
- Can be used immediately without any allergy testing
- Results are immediate and predictable
- May last longer than bovine collagen

Disadvantages:

- The cost of Cosmoderm and Cosmoplast is more expensive than bovine collagen

NLite Laser Collagen Replenishment

The NLite Laser Collagen Replenishment is an FDA approved noninvasive, non-ablative laser treatment that offers a more effective way to replace collagen. This procedure uses a specific frequency of yellow laser light that targets tiny blood vessels in the skin that release mediators to stimulate a person's own natural collagen growth.

Advantages:

- Painless
- May last up to years, instead of months
- Performed in thirty minutes or less
- Noninvasive
- Allergic reaction, scarring, or infection is very unlikely
- Gradual and discreet improvement over time

Dr. Alexander Covey is one of the few physicians in New York to be certified by the American Board of Laser Surgery. He is a Fellow of the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgeons, and is also a member of the American Society for Laser Medicine and Surgery, the American College of Physicians, the New York State Medical Society, and the International Society of Cosmetic Laser Surgeons. He has been a practicing physician since 1988 and is affiliated with Central Suffolk Hospital in Riverhead. East End Laser Care has offices located at 349 Meeting House Lane in Southampton, New York and 445 Main Street in Center Moriches, New York.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face.....with Annette

Shave Options

Have you heard about the new moisturizers that are cropping up promising to reduce our shaving time to less than half? Plus minimize the hair that does come in? Being the skeptic that I am, I decided to put them to the test. The can be found at your local supermarket on the shelf with the other moisturizers, in drug stores and places such as Target and Walmart. The first one I tried was Jergens Naturally Smooth (13 ounce, retail price varies, no more than $4). A light fragrance was a nice touch and it wasn't heavy at all. Immediately it promises all day moisture and a silky soft skin, which it did, comparable to any other skin smoothing cream or lotion. It said in about 4 to 8 weeks, there should be a need to shave less often, and the hair would become softer and finer, plus shaving should be faster. They were right. Only it happened at the end of the second week with me! In fact, I had to try to remember when was the last time I did shave.

That was a nice surprise, not having to wait all that long. And lastly, with continued use, they claim shaving will continue to be faster and less frequent. They were so far holding up to their promise. With summer coming, shaving every day gets to be such a chore, that if there was some way other than waxing, it would be welcome. I find waxing pure torture. With these products, you may sort of feel a hair growth but it is so not there! It simply is not as visible. The hair is really finer, so that is what you are feeling. A fine downy sort of stubble, that is barely noticeable. I cannot wait till I am into my eighth week to experience the full effects of these great products.

Curel Shave Mimimizing Moisturizer is another one that I want to give a shot. It wasn't there when I first started looking for them, in fact, Jergens was the only one on the shelf. The only difference between Curel and Jergens seems to be that Curel has soy in it. What it is doing there is beyond me. Must have some sort of skin softening properties. Curel claims that there will be marked difference in your shaving routine in about 4 weeks. I am guessing that most of these products don't want to make earlier claims to cover themselves. But you can expect to see a big difference if you are light blonde. It probably would work in a week. I think this is great to introduce young teens to. The less they have to shave the better and they won't be haunting you to get costly (sometimes painful) waxes.

Walmart carries an array of hair stop products. One I saw was called just that, Hair Stop. It was almost twice the price of Jergens and Curel. On their Body container, it specifically states not to use it on the face. And then a little shift to my left and I found their other Hair Stop for Faces Only there. Hmmm. Sneaky marketing, I wondered. I am wondering if Jergens and Curel would work on mens beards. I don't see why not. Maybe we can get our own bearded Dan to give it a test run. How 'bout it Dan? If any of you guys try it, I would love some feedback on your results.

This couldn't have come at a better time as far as I am concerned. Tuck it into your beach bag and apply just as you would any other moisturizer, can only speed up the process, I figure.

Police Blotter

Police dispatch in East Hampton got a call from an anonymous dude at Ditch Plains who was worried about a truck that seemed to be slipping into the Atlantic. Police showed up to find a two-wheel drive Ford pick-up parked in the shore break of the Montauk ocean front. Police gathered that no one was in the vehicle and were able to ascertain the owner's name and address from the registration sticker. He was contacted and later arrived to meet police. He told police that an acquaintance had borrowed the truck but he couldn't locate him. When he is found, the suspect will face charges of grand larceny in the 3rd degree for the "loss" of the $4,000 truck and the contents of the bed, a $100 wheel barrow and a $400 saw, that apparently "floated" away.

No officer in East Hampton is "wet behind the ears" this week after the previous incident and this next one that came through headquarters on Thursday. A Kings Point man from East Hampton called police when he saw a distressed boater trying to upright his capsized sailboat. The boater quickly became a swimmer when his vessel tipped 200 yards off Lion Head Beach, East Hampton. Marine Patrol, EHPD and local EMT's were quick on the scene and assisted the man back to shore, treating him for hypothermia and also rescuing his boat.

Another watery witness called police last week, but this time the only thing that was witnessed was the absence of a $1,500 pool heater. The victim, a Hedges Bank Road resident from East Hampton, called police on Friday to report that someone had stolen the expensive water heater. He told police that it could've been taken any time between last Sunday the 13th and This past Saturday. Police are still investigating.

East Hampton Police might want to check out that hypothermia victim a bit closer and ask him about a $2,890 sailboat that was stolen from a

South Lake Drive beach in Montauk. The owner of the boat is a bit puzzled as to the whereabouts. He told police that the last time he saw it was early December, but when he returned in late march, it had disappeared. Police are checking with local boat yards and East Hampton Marine Patrol.

And meanwhile, back on the mainland... Police pulled over a '92 Ford pick-up truck that had a trailer in tow. The problem was that the license plate was only wired on half way and it had flipped up, not allowing the cop to read it. Upon pulling over, the driver was unable to produce any kind of license or paperwork for himself or vehicle. A quick background check revealed that the driver had lost his license for driving while impaired back in March. He was arrested for aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle in the second degree and his truck was impounded.

Dan's Letters

SOS: IT MAKES A DIFFERENCE

Dear Dan,

And Linda and everyone involved with SOS, on behalf of our family, LCPL Matthew Repp, and all the soldiers serving in the United States, Middle East and throughout the world, we thank you for the wonderful gather at the Star Room in Wainscott on Saturday, April 12. It was heart warming to see the support of the local community.

As parents of a United States Marine serving in Iraq, everyday is filled with concern. The words of support, cards and hugs have helped us to remain positive during this time. As of March 26, our son Matthew had received mail and packages from New York, Texas, Vermont, Michigan, New Hampshire and Maryland. The support has been overwhelming. One local third grade class sent letters and they received a letter from Matt describing his days in Kuwait. A young boy in the class, whose father died on 9/11, received a personal letter from him.

The following is a part of a letter Matthew wrote (dated March 22) before he was sent from Kuwait into Iraq. I wanted to share it with you.

Hey, what's going on stateside? Hope everyone is good and all is well. Just by looking at this date you can probably imagine what I've been up to in the last 72 hours. We've been sleeping on and off for hours at a time. Double fire watch and it has gotten to 100 degrees during the day. You can pour droplets of sweat out of your rubber boots during the day. Always seem to be waiting for some new "word."

I've been getting mail from a lot of people and I always write them back if I have time. I even got a letter from a pastor in Texas. It is always good to hear from everybody. I got a letter from Katy Long today; the smell of her perfume damn near made me pass out. It was nice to smell something besides farts and sweat. I wish I could write about what's going on but it'll have to wait...

*Our company has been split up in three ways for a while now, so I don't see much of Chris or Ski. I rack next to my buddy Aaron; he's from Nebraska. We stay up late most nights and bullsh*t. He's 25 and getting married when he gets back. He hasn't been home once in two years – Okinawa then this wonderful desert. This place is like a giant beach with no water. Sometimes, on a cold, early morning when the sun hasn't risen, it looks like an endless blanket of snow...*

Well, Ally, I know how you feel wanting to leave for college and everything. Me, on the other hand, when I get home, I think I'll sit my happy butt down in one place for a while. Being in the Marine Corp. gives you a deeper respect for life that I feel a lot of people my age is missing.

Watching war on TV and being part of one can change a lot of views on things. Well, I am going to hit the rack. Don't be surprised if the Marines have the flag of freedom flying over Baghdad soon.

Love,

Matt

PS. Tell everyone thank you for the letters of support. I also received a package from you and Damien, it felt like Christmas. Thank you.

Thanks for again for your support.

Nancy and Allan Repp
Westhampton

Thanks to everyone for Supporting our Soldiers at SOS.

LOOK OUT FOR THE BUTT SHAVERS

Dear Dan,

Re: "Putt Putt"

Life today on Shelter Island is not at all like it was fifty years ago. It's not even like it was twenty years ago when I came here. No cars? Come on... I dare you to take a long walk "right on the side of the road" during the summer season and not have your butt shaved. As for people driving 25 mph they only do that on New York Avenue then they see the cop in the bushes and figure it's best to stick to the speed limit. The electric car is a neat idea, but first the speed limit law would have to be changed. You cannot drive from either of the ferries to a road with a 35-mph speed limit without driving on Route 114, which is a 40-mph road. In addition, no one could drive an electric car to the IGA supermarket, which is only accessible via Route 114. By the way, I read in another publication that Daimler Chrysler has introduced the energy efficient electric car to offset the gross inefficiency of its SUV's thereby averaging out to a figure that will need new government standards.

Melanie Coronetz

Best thing is to just go for a walk. —D.R.

SIR DAN SHALL SAVE POXY

Dear Dan,

Thanks for uncovering the Harold Levine offer to Southampton that will save Poxabogue Golf Course from a housing development. But will they wake up and do it? Seems to me that Southampton isn't really interested in spending money to save a facility right on its East Hampton boundary, so I reckon it's up to you, as you have the clout through your esteemed organ!

In England, wrecking the only public golf course for fifty miles would be a treasonable crime, so come on Dan, show us you can stop it happening here. Lead a campaign to SAVE THE POX-ABOGUE and persuade Southampton the Harold Levine plan is a very sensible alternative that retains a superb public facility and prevents destruction of yet more East End green-belt land.

Good luck in your efforts, and we'll petition the Queen to give you an honorary Knighthood if you succeed.

Peter Sephton
England

My esteemed organ indeed has considerable clout.

—D.R.

CALL ME ISHMAEL... OR DUCK WALK

Dear Dan,

Is not Southampton's Duck Walk Winery named after the part of a Sag Harbor whale ship also called Duck Walk?

We're all familiar with the twin, 300-gallon iron kettles used to render whale fat, and blubber into valuable oil. The hot fire under these cauldrons was burnt on top of bricks that also encased these huge pots. Beneath the firebox, a brick lined channel constantly flowed cooling seawater to prevent the supporting deck from bursting into flames. This channel, the whalers referred to as their "duck walk." A local term for a local winery flowing wine instead of seawater.

Captain B. Robertson

Enjoy captivating sunsets and southerly breezes from this enchanting waterfront home. Spacious and gracious, perfect for entertaining, you catch sight of the sun and sea as you enter the expansive center hall. To your left is the formal dining room with slider to waterside deck, sunken living room with fireplace and bay window. Modern kitchen with breakfast bar, and mudroom with laundry. To your right is the waterside den (or extra bedroom), and guest wing with 2 bedrooms and 2 full tiled baths, that can be closed off for privacy. The entire 2nd floor is the Master Suite with sitting room/office, large bedroom with cathedral ceilings, His and Her walk-in closets, and waterside balcony with glorious views. Master marble bath with whirlpool tub, 2 vanities, and a separate shower with bench. In addition there's central air conditioning, security system, full basement, separate 2-car garage and wonderful rose flower garden. Large waterside deck overlooking rolling lawn leading to your own private beachfront. Plenty of room for a pool as property is 1.33 acres. This is a rare opportunity and a luxury you can't afford to miss. Our co-exclusive and initial offering at $2,250,000.
